Trojans Beat Duke, 7-3, in Last-Minute Pass Attack

Southern California Climaxes Comeback With Brilliant Victory In Rose Bowl Classic

By Robert Myers
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 2.—Southern California's mighty Trojans, riding to the peak of the comeback trail with a 61-yard touchdown drive in the last minute of play, defeated Duke University's Big Blue eleven, 7 to 3, before 91,000 spectators today.

Wrecking Duke's proud boast of never a loss, never a tie and never a point surrendered in nine games of the 1938 schedule, the warriors of Troy, celebrating their return to the Rose Bowl after an absence of six years, traveled through the air to victory about 45 seconds before the final gun.

The gigantic, overflow throng, gathered under bleak skies for this twenty-fourth annual Tournament of Roses football game, saw an unheralded substitute and sophomore team up to break the unmatched record of the Iron Dukes with four straight passes.

Nave and Krueger Star

The substitute story book back was Doyle Nave, and the sophomore end was "Antelope Al" Krueger, the lad from Antelope Valley. Krueger took Nave's last long pass, good for 18 yards, as he waited in one corner of the end zone, and there went Duke's hope of victory in its inaugural appearance in the big bowl.

For three quarters it was a battle between the men of Troy, fighting for Southern California's fifth triumph in the Bowl, and Eric (The Red) Tipton, Duke's one-man offensive threat. For three quarters neither team could get inside the other's 35-yard line, but the Dukes finally drove to Southern California's 18, back of a 23-yard pass from Tipton to George McAfee, and set the stage for the appearance of Tony Ruffa, the place-kicking star of the Blue Devils.

Ruffa Boots Field Goal

With the ball on the 23, Ruffa kicked it high and squarely through the uprights. The three points looked as big as a house.

Southern California suddenly caught fire, and the Dukes seemed caught in the conflagration. Bob Spangler, Duke safety man, fumbled a Trojan punt, Phil Gaspar recovered it and it was S. C.'s ball on the Duke's 10. But the Dukes refused to yield and the Trojans tried a field goal from the 25. Gaspar's boot missed.

Tipton kicked out to the Trojan 39, and Grenville Lansdell, S. C. quarterback engineered a drive that took the ball into Duke territory. Lansdell made 5, Bob Peoples added 1, Lansdell made 7 and first down on the Duke 48. He made 5 more off right end and Krueger picked up 4 on an end-around play. Lansdell fired a short pass over the line to Peoples for 5, to reach the Duke 35.

Trojans Open Up Passes

Howard Jones, the Trojan coach, suddenly sent in Doyle Nave to replace Lansdell. The head man was going by air for that touchdown, and Nave was to pilot the attack. A time-out penalty put the ball on the 40 and Nave started to work.

Fading far back, keeping out of range of the Duke ends, he passed for 14 yards to Krueger. Changing his direction, he whipped another for 10 to Krueger, and still another was completed to Antelope Al, but it lost 2 yards.

The clock was ticking off the seconds, and the huge crowd was roaring with excitement. Nave again called a pass, drifted far back and fired away. The ball cut diagonally across the field and came to rest in Krueger's outstretched arms.

Anything that followed was an anticlimax. Gaspar added the ex-

Wage-Hour Lawyer Dies in Hotel Mystery

Friend Discovers Body In Apartment; Chemist To Analyze Powder

Police last night were investigating the death of a 31-year-old Labor Department attorney, found lying in a pool of blood in their apartment yesterday by a roommate.

ALPERN

The dead man is Carl C. Alpern, lawyer in the wages and hour division of the Department of Labor. His body was found in the hallway of their apartment at the Chastleton Hotel, Sixteenth and I streets northwest, by Charles Rovin, 28, lawyer with the Social Security Board.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was investigating the possibility of suicide after a search of the apartment by police revealed a quantity of powder in a half-burned paper in the bathroom. The powder was to be analyzed today by a chemist to determine whether or not it is poison.

The fact that gratings had been torn from a kitchen stove and a tumbler smashed indicated Alpern died in great pain. Dr. MacDonald said discolorations on Alpern's body may have been caused by a convulsion. An autopsy will be held today.

An Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor said Alpern had been dead from 24 to 30 hours, placing his death at early Sunday afternoon.

Rovin told Sergt. John Wise of the homicide squad he had last seen his roommate Saturday. Rovin returned yesterday from a visit to Virginia, Wise said, and on trying to enter the apartment found the door barred. He forced his way into the hall and found Alpern's body against the door.

Friends described Alpern, a brilliant lawyer, as of a moody disposition. He had attempted suicide in New York last year, it was said.

A native of Pittsburgh, Alpern has been in the Government service four years. He served with the Agriculture and Interior Departments before joining the Department of Labor four months ago.

Alpern was a Harvard College and Law School graduate.

100 Relief Fraud Cases Listed Here

Prosecution of Scores To Follow Final Check by Congress Sub-Committees

District relief investigators plan to submit to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal for prosecution the names of several score fraud cases listed in the report of Burdette G. Lewis on local relief conditions, it was learned yesterday.

A subsequent installment of the report, it was revealed, lists 100 cases by case numbers. The greater portion are said to be cases in which relief clients are obtaining relief through fraudulent misrepresentation.

Although the names of the relief recipients will not be included in the report, they will be turned over to Representative Collins, Mississippi, chairman of the House Appropriations sub-committee on District appropriations, and to Senator Overton, Louisiana, who will head the corresponding sub-committee of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Prosecutions Asked

Investigators intend to turn the names over to Seal with the request that the recipients be prosecuted. Seal, after reviewing the evidence in the various cases, will decide which ones to pass on to the United States district attorney.

Lewis, meanwhile, in the second installment of his report to the special advisory committee, charged that 31 District families whose income from other sources exceed $300 per month also receive social security old-age maintenance grants averaging about $15 per month.

The 100 cases to be listed by Lewis will appear in pages 17 to 58 of the report, it was learned. Included are instances of households receiving some form of relief and having substantial income from other sources. Among these, it is said, are the "four de luxe cases" mentioned by Collins during consideration of the District relief appropriation at the last session of Congress.

This part of the report, which will be made public in the near future, will amply answer the demand of Elwood Street, director of public welfare, that Lewis support by citing specific cases his charge that fraud and "chiseling" by relief clients abounds in the District, investigators said.

Street Willing to Resign

Other developments in the controversy over the Lewis report, the first installment of which was made public Sunday, follow:

The charge was made in a responsible quarter that the Board of Public Welfare had refrained from referring cases of fraud to the Corporation Counsel on the ground that this sort of activity did not fit in with the work of social agencies.

Street vigorously denied this, declaring "the procedure always has been to submit such charges for appropriate action."

Street, referring to Lewis' statement that he was more a director of public relations than "a real chief administrative officer," said he would be glad to submit his resignation any time the Board of Public Welfare indicated they desired it.

He declared that, when the full Lewis report has been made available, the board's public assistance division—caustically criticized by Lewis in the first installment—would review the 100 cases, drop from relief those cases found to be undeserving and ask for prosecution of fraud cases which a recheck verifies.

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee declared the Lewis report confirmed "numerous complaints which have been made to

D. C. Woman Is Found Dead In N. Y. 2 Days After Losing Job

Mrs. Virginia Corley, 35-year-old Washington brunette, who faced the new year without a job and without relief from the torture of a long illness, was found dead last night in a one-room studio apartment in Greenwich Village, New York City.

MRS. CORLEY

In the apartment police found a box of sleeping tablets with two pills remaining and a letter from Mrs. Beulah Brewer, 1324 Monroe street northwest, a close friend and fellow worker, informing Mrs. Corley her resignation from a secretarial position with the National Research Council "must be in by December 31."

About a month ago Mrs. Corley, a Duke University graduate, took a leave of absence and went to Florida to seek relief from the headaches she had suffered for many years. Only Mrs. Brewer and her sister, Miss Jean Laughbridge, with whom she lived at 1819 Nineteenth street northwest, knew she had gone.

Neither Mrs. Brewer nor the sister had word of her until they were informed of her death yesterday. In the interim she had wired her resignation to her superior at council headquarters in the National Academy of Science Building on Constitution avenue.

Ten days ago she subleased the Greenwich Village apartment from

Murphy Takes Oath On Mother's Bible

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT — HOMER CUMMINGS — FRANK MURPHY

Becomes Cabinet's Only Redhead; Ceremony in Roosevelt's Study; Uses Book He Reads an Hour Daily

With his hand on a Bible given him by his mother as a high school graduation present, Frank Murphy, retiring Michigan Governor, yesterday took the oath of office as Attorney General in a quiet ceremony in President Roosevelt's study.

The 45-year-old lawyer, who becomes the only redhead in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, succeeds genial, conservative Homer S. Cummings, Connecticut, who retired yesterday to resume practice of law.

The oath was administered by Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the United States Supreme Court in the presence of a small group including the President, Vice President Garner, Mr. and Mrs. Cummings, other Cabinet officers and Murphy's friends and relatives.

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic leaders predicted confirmation of the new Cabinet member without difficulty, although Senator Ashurst, Arizona, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said "brief hearings" probably would be held.

Roosevelt plans to send Murphy's nomination to the Senate today or

'Hang Il Duce,' Corsicans Cry To Daladier

Islanders Give Premier Riotous Welcome, Cheer Warning to Italy

By the Associated Press.

Bastia, Corsica, Jan. 2.—Premier Daladier of France circled the Island of Corsica with a fleet of warships today in a symbolic warning to Premier Mussolini of Italy that France is prepared to fight to keep her empire.

He addressed throngs in Ajaccio and Bastia and in both places tens of thousands of Corsicans made no attempt to conceal their idea of the object of the trip. They greeted Daladier with shouts of "Mussolini au poteau!" ("Mussolini to the gallows!") and then sent him off with the chant ringing in his ears.

Just before he left Bastia for Tunis Daladier cried to the citizens: "We prefer death to servitude."

At Ajaccio in the morning he had stated flatly his trip had been planned to touch there and then to make a circle back around the island as a guarantee that Corsica, a department of France, had nothing to fear for the future.

Daladier told the populace "France does not need to be aggressive or menacing."

"She has no need to raise her voice," he said. "She must be strong; she is, and that is what I have come to tell you now while

Accuses Them of Aiding Loyalists; London Fears 'Incident'

By the Associated Press.

Burgos, Spain, Jan. 2.—Spanish Insurgent military authorities tonight said British Pro-Consul Ernest Golding and his wife had been arrested at San Sebastian and were being held for investigation for alleged complicity in espionage activity.

The arrests were an outgrowth of investigation into the "dirty shirt" case in which espionage documents were found wrapped in the valise of British Vice-Consul Harold Goodman when he crossed the border December 19.

Golding's name first was mentioned in the case by an Insurgent communique December 26 when it was announced he and "Mr. Rattenbury, attache at the British agency in Burgos" were listed as Spanish government agents in the documents found in Goodman's valise.

The concierge of the British consulate at San Sebastian, a man so far identified only as "Firmin," was also connected with the case. He committed suicide some weeks ago.

(In London it was indicated a serious diplomatic situation might arise because of the arrests.)

Insurgents announced the arrest of 50 persons December 26 in a widespread espionage ring believed to have tipped off Government forces to the Insurgent offensive launched December 23.

48 Navy Bombers To Fly 3,000 Miles

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 2 (AP).—The largest and longest sustained flight in naval aviation history will start from San Diego Bay next Monday when 48 twin-motored patrol bombers of Patrol Wing 1 will take off for Aruba in the West Indies via Coco Solo, C. Z. The flight is part of the fleet maneuvers in the Caribbean.

The 3,000-mile flight from San Diego to Panama will follow a course along the Lower California and West Mexican coasts to the Gulf of Fonseca, over the jungles paralleling the proposed Nicaraguan Canal to Chiriqui Lagoon in the Caribbean and thence southward to Coco Solo.

Sen. Overton Would Scrap 'Lump Sum'

Favors Sliding Scale Of Aid to D. C. Based On Tax-Exempt Federal Holdings

Congress will be asked to abolish its present lump-sum contributions to the District and instead substitute a flexible permanent formula of payments based on the amount of untaxable Federal property within the Capital.

Sponsor of the proposal is Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, new chairman of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations. The mild-mannered legislator, who just arrived, revealed his plans yesterday.

"The thing that causes most controversy with regard to the District budget," he said, "seems to be the Federal contribution. I believe that some plan for reaching the figure without guesswork should be worked out."

District Hails Proposal

District leaders, headed by Commissioner Hazen, last night hailed the plan as a start to obtaining a more equitable yearly contribution from the Federal Government. Since 1935 Congress has appropriated a lump sum of $5,000,000 as its annual share in maintenance of the District government.

According to Senator Overton's proposal, the amount of tax-exempt Federal property within the District would be used as a basis for the contribution and, as the Federal holdings increase, the contribution would increase.

The Louisianan pointed out that he had not had time to study the problem in detail and that some difficulties might arise in estimating the value of Federal property.

"My idea would be to take the land value alone," he explained, "and to figure it in relation to all taxable property in the Capital."

Hazen Sees "Right Track"

Informed of Overton's proposal last night, Commissioner Hazen declared:

"He is on the right track. The Federal Government should pay taxes just like everybody else. Not for buildings like the White House, of course, but for their office buildings. The Navy Yard is actually a huge manufacturing plant. And it is the District that pays for the streets, lights, and sewers adjacent to these buildings.

"Instead of the present $5,000,000, the Federal share of District costs should be between $10,00,000 and $12,000,000.

District officials recalled that for many years the United States shared half of the District's expense bill, and that it later changed this to a 60-40 basis, with the Federal Government assuming the latter percentage. Although this latter proportion was not repealed until last year, Congress had ignored the arrangement for the last several years, voting instead lump sums.

Capital Burden Growing

Federal participtaion in D. C. expenses hit a peak of $9,500,000 in 1932, fell the following year to $7,775,000, in 1934 to $5,700,000, and since then to $5,000,000.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and chairman of the District Tax Advisory Committee, said he was "highly favorable" to the plan. He added:

"Any such formula which can bring about the equitable distribution of the expense of running the District government has my support. Senator Overton's proposition sounds like a good basis on which to start work."

In tax discussions last fall, Maj. Donovan disclosed that with the Federal contribution remaining at $5,000,000 annually, and with District expense increasing at the rate of about $1,000,000 each year, the Capital is bearing an increasingly heavy burden.

Study Election, New Deal Laws, Bankhead Urges

Renominated, He Says Modification May Be Indicated; Martin Minority Leader

By Robert C. Albright.

Democratic pleas for harmony last night mingled with leadership declarations for "correction and modification" of some Administration laws, as the Seventy-sixth Congress completed preliminary organization for the session opening at noon today.

Speaker Bankhead urged Democrats to analyze election results and take steps to meet public opinion if Democratic reverses were not due to local conditions. He predicted leaders and Democrats in the ranks will "act with as much harmony and coherence as may be possible without surrender of individual intellectual integrity upon some particular phases of legislation."

Bankhead broadcast his views over a National network a few hours after House Democrats in caucus renominated him for the Speakership. Representative Rayburn, of Texas, was re-elected majority leader. Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, whose views have not always squared with the Administration's on tax matters, was chosen caucus chairman, and Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, caucus secretary.

"Mill" Starts Tomorrow

Later by acclamation House Republicans in night conference elected a new minority leader—Representative Martin, North Attleboro, Mass., publisher, and chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. Martin succeeds Representative Snell, of New York, retired.

The conference which lasted 3½ hours, re-elected Representative Woodruff of Michigan as its chairman and Representative Hope of Kansas as secretary.

It selected W. F. Russell, county treasurer of Delaware County, Pa., to be special minority clerk of the House, a position which pays $3,000 a year. Several former Congressmen were unsuccessful candidates for the place.

Senate Democrats organized for the session Saturday, re-electing Senator Barkley majority leader.

Barkley and Rayburn held a legislative huddle with the President at lunch, but slipped out of the White House without seeing reporters. Rayburn returned to the Capitol to urge House Democrats to caucus to forget their differences.

On the stroke of noon today Vice President Garner in the Senate and Speaker Bankhead in the House will call the new session to order. Routine business will be the order of the day. The legislative mill will begin grinding tomorrow after President Roosevelt delivers his message on the state of the Union to both Houses in joint session.

Wadsworth Withdraws

House Republicans unanimously chose Martin as their leader after Representative Wadsworth, of New York, sole remaining contestant for the post, approved his choice. Representative Englebright, of California, is to be selected minority whip.

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, nominated Martin as "a symbol of the Republican Party in this House."

"We are indicating to the country our attitude toward the major issues confronting the Nation upon which we hope to build the foundations of a successful campaign in 1940," Treadway told the conference.

Martin said in a statement after his election he believed "firmly that it must be our responsibility to place patriotism above politics."

"All legislation which promises to promote the progress and prosperity of the country will command our support," he said, "and we will not hesitate to oppose vigorously

20 Middies Ride A Gale, Halve Air Time from Ohio

Pushed by a tailwind of gale proportions, two special passenger planes bringing 20 U. S. Naval Academy midshipmen to Washington from Cleveland, Ohio, yesterday cut the usual flying time exactly in half and hung up a new record for Cleveland - Washington passenger plane flights.

The planes, ten-passenger Boeings of Pennsylvania Central Airlines, made the nonstop trip into the Capital in 86 minutes, landing at 1:54 and 2 p. m. at Washington Airport. The pilots reported their planes scudded through the air at an average speed of 215 miles per hour, although they often flew about 275 miles per hour.

Behind them, they said, was a tailwind blowing 60 miles per hour. The two planes flew six minutes apart all the way, ignoring the Pittsburgh stop and chalking up same flying time—86 minutes for the 312 miles. Usual flying time is 172 minutes, officials said. The pilots and their copilots were Albert J. Slimon, George McKee, James T. Rinker and Edward Pennock.

Snyder Favors $100,000,000 More for Army

Approval of Congress Group Forecast; Rockets Urged as Weapons

By the Associated Press.

A possible $100,000,000 increase in the Army's appropriation this year was forecast yesterday by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of a subcommittee in charge of the War Department supply bill.

"My committee," he said in a statement, "will be inclined to appropriate something like $100,000,000 more this year for national defense equipment than we did last year.

"We expect by 1942 to have 8,000 airplanes, modern and up-to-date, with seacoast and anti-aircraft equipment, sufficient to keep any foe from encroaching upon our shores, and at the same time be able to help our neighbor, South America, in case the Monroe Doctrine would be encroached upon by a foreign power."

Last year's Army appropriation was $463,000,000, which, Snyder

New Congressman, 150 Friends, Arrive By Special Train

By the Associated Press.

Representative-elect Joseph A. McArdle arrived from Pittsburgh last night with 150 relatives, friends and political associates aboard a special train.

After he has been sworn in today, the new Congressman will entertain the party at his office suite. In the evening McArdle's traveling constituents will honor him at a dinner.

McArdle is 35, a former member of the Pennsylvania General Assembly. In the party which accompanied him were his wife, Margaret; his parents, Councilman and Mrs. P. J. McArdle, of Pittsburgh; John J. Kane and George Rankin, jr., Allegheny (Pittsburgh) County Commissioners, and Sheriff John Heinz of Allegheny County.

Nazis Draft 400,000 Girls For Housework and Farms

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—Four hundred thousand German girls are required to put in a year of labor service on farms and households under a new order effective yesterday.

The compulsory labor year now applies to all unmarried girls between 18 and 25 years of age except those physically incapacitated.

Its introduction was based on the necessity of having more hands to carry out Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering's intensified four-year plan for Germany's self-sufficiency.

The new order was signed on behalf of Goering by President Friedrich Syrup of the Reich's institute for job finding and unemployment insurance.

It stipulated further that girls under 25 years of age who, after March 1, wish to obtain work in business or the civil service must furnish evidence of at least one year's activity on a farm or in a household.

Labor service previously was compulsory only for girls under 25 years of age who were seeking jobs in clothing, textile or tobacco industries or as office employes

Under the old system, the partly compulsory and partly voluntary labor service lasted only six months. It attracted about 100,000 girls

Girls desiring to select their own place of work under the new order may do so with the approval of the federal labor office.

Girl students in recognized agricultural or home economics schools may receive a half-year's credit toward their compulsory work year.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Unbeknownst to himself, President Roosevelt may soon have an extra vacancy to fill on the Supreme Court. Justice McReynolds has been telling intimate friends that if the President makes a certain appointment to the highest bench he will resign. He said it most emphatically.

* * * *

...ready to go?

This is a blow which the President might take with astonishing equanimity . . . Justice McReynolds, who absented himself during both eulogies for the late Justice Cardozo, is somewhat less than enthusiastic about the possibility that Professor Felix Frankfurter may become his colleague . . . This service, Mr. President, is free.

Incidentally, Martin Dies got a phone call from a New York millionaire not long ago, who was thinking of putting $10,000 into Dies' Red-hunt, and wanted the Congressman to come up and talk it over. The millionaire said he was representing a group of wealthy men.

"It's a trap!" reflected Congressman Dies, and decided to take his wife along as a witness . . .

"—the Justice would resign?"

One of the patriotic gentlemen ready to invest some money in the hunt for communists is an eminent young slapdash, polo-playing scion of a famed family . . . Another is the adventurous, rambunctious, red-haired former editor of a great newspaper.

At this juncture an element of slapstick entered into the Dies inquiry; the rich men were afraid their desire to "angel" the show might leak out; so they held on to their money.

A quaintly pagan touch was injected into the Christmas festivities around the Capital by the inmates of the German Embassy.

Apparently in conformity with the instructions issued in Berlin, the Nazi diplomats made it quite a point to wish their friends a "happy Yule" instead of a "merry Christmas."

One cut-up at the State Department, aggrieved by such paganism, sent the German Embassy a "happy Chanukah" card. (Or says he did.) Chanukah is the non-Aryan version of Christmas.

If American newspapers were edited like Berlin papers:

"Adolf (Butch) Hitler, the Berlin criminal, has instructed his Washington mouthpieces to undermine Christmas with a barrage of "Happy Yules." Butch's American sidelines of espionage, propaganda and sabotage have recently received some setbacks on this side and he is thinking of liquidating some of his mob."

Perish the thought.

"—ready for a scuffle"

As the Congressmen troop in for the new session, ready for a scuffle, probably the most dramatic, triumphant return is that of tall, courtly, ruddy, silver-thatched Arthur Jenks, of New Hampshire. The retired shoe magnate and banker (a Republican) was kicked out by the Democrats after serving more than a year after a contested election which involved first a "tie vote" and later 24 missing ballots.

* * * *

The Democratic House was more than fair to him; it sent a subcommittee to New Hampshire to ask hundreds of voters how they had voted . . . Jenks made a farewell speech which left several softies in the house moist-eyed and lumpy-throated. Then he went back to the New Hampshire hills and defeated Alphonse Roy, the Democrat who had ousted him.

Million Watch Mummers Parade In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Jan. 2 (AP).—The dancing feet of Philadelphia's Mummers beat a day-long reception to the new year along Broad street today.

Spectators stood 10 and 15 deep along the 5-mile route to watch the annual extravaganza of the spangled clubs and the high jinks of the comic divisions. Police estimated a million persons viewed the pageant, from which women participants are barred by tradition.

In contrast to former years, temperatures in the fifties—abnormally high for January—prevailed for the parade that Philadelphia inaugurated in 1901 to check the riotous New Year celebrations of the previous century.

Awards to competitive clubs and individuals totaled $25,000.

Income Tax Adopted for Townsend Plan

Pension Leader Sees House Victory for Revised Age Proposal

Dr. Francis E. Townsend is back in Washington with an idea he is certain will bring about realization of his dream of seeing every person in the Nation over 60 receiving and spending $200 each month.

The 72-year-old doctor is here to re-establish offices this morning in the Washington Building, Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

"Republicans and Democrats alike are faced with a dire problem—taxes increasing along with poverty and the number of persons forced on relief," Dr. Townsend said last night.

Nothing Else Offered

"Nothing has been offered by the New Deal or the Republicans which will bring recovery," he said, "and I am confident that our pension plan is going to pass in the House of Representatives." He refused to predict the course of his measure in the Senate.

Reason for his confidence, Dr. Townsend said, is that he has a new weapon to use in Congress—an amendment to his original plan, similar to a part of of general welfare act which went to Congress at the last session.

The change is a proposal for a blanket tax of 2 per cent on the gross individual income of every employed person of voting age.

Dr. Townsend studied such a tax system this summer in Hawaii and was so impressed that he brought Louis C. Silva, chief deputy tax commissioner of the islands, to Washington on a year's leave of absence to expound the proposal in hearings he hopes to obtain before Congress early this month.

Counts "Hard Times" Ally

"I wouldn't be so optimistic if times were different," spoke the pension advocate who once walked out on a Senate investigation of his plan. But we have ane alley in both the House and Senate—hard times.

"If Congress does not want to accept a rational plan, it must accept the responsibility for the irrational acts of hunger-driven mobs. And if Congress does not act favorably, there is going to be a real housecleaning. Only those persons friendly to the Townsend plan will be back in 1940."

He declared that at least 154 members of the House are certain to vote for his plan.

"Doubtless the plan will be fought by the Democrats by seeking liberalization of the payments under Social Security, a procedure which will only impose additional burdens on property taxation," he said.

Then he explained the gross income tax plan, which will necessitate an amendment to the original act presented by Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, who will present it again at the present session.

"The tax will be a replacement tax, doing away with all need of taxation for charitable purposes," he declared.

Annual Registration

The tax proposal calls for annual registration of every person of majority. The Government gives each individual a tax form which is filled out and turned in every 30 days with the tax.

In this way, a direct check upon conditions of business can be kept from month to month, Dr. Townsend explained. Pension payments to the approximately 8,000,000 qualified persons could start within a year, he asserted.

The funds pouring in from the tax would enable a maximum pension of $200 a month and in a year's time would build up a surplus which would be used to wipe out the public debt for all time, Dr. Townsend claims.

Dr. Townsend said the general welfare act will be placed in the House hopper today. He conferred at length yesterday with Senator Downey (Democrat), of California.

Meanwhile, the General Welfare Federation of America, rival organization of the Townsendites, announced it had "dared" Administration leaders to lalow its proposal to go to the floor of the House for a vote. Its plan calls for a 2 per cent gross income tax with exemptions provided for the first $100 of income each month and for amounts paid out for wages, commissions, taxes, interest and loans.

Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said yesterday he would oppose the confirmation of Harry Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce.

GEORGE

The Georgian, who was returned to the Senate last year despite opposition from the National Administration, declared his objection to Hopkins was not caused "by any part he may or may not have played in the elections of 1938."

"It is based," he said, "upon my conclusion that he does not possess the necessary qualifications and is lacking in the experience needed by the head of the Department of Commerce."

Tennessee will have only one Senator until Senator-elect Tom Stewart takes office January 16. Stewart won't quit as district attorney general at Winchester, Tenn., until his political ally, Prentice Cooper, becomes Governor and can appoint his successor.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, yesterday advocated concentrating all the Government agencies with distribute money in one unit and placing it under direction of Secretary Ickes, another Illinoisan, as administrator of public works.

The Senator said in an interview he believed such concentration would cut expenses, curtail the clerical work, remove conflict in authority and distribution and prevent duplication of grants of money.

He said Ickes had earned the honor "by his unparalleled achievements in his present offices."

Coast Guard Saves Yachtsman, Wife On Sinking Ketch

Baltimore, Jan. 2 (AP).—A Connecticut yachtsman and his wife owed their safety today to Coast Guardsmen who rescued them from the 39-foot auxiliary ketch, Hokasol, which ran aground off Mountain Bar near Gibson Island in Chesapeake Bay.

Robert N. Lewis, of Greenwich, Conn., owner of the ketch, said he and his wife took turns at the bilge pump and sounding distres signals on the ketch's foghorn. Gibson Island residents, discovering the boat in distress, notified the Coast Guard at Curtis Bay.

X-Ray Equals Radium Worth $90,000,000

New Device for Cancer Treatment Also Peers Through Steel

By the Associated Press.

Schnectady, N. Y., Jan. 2.—A new kind of million-volt X-ray tube, equal to $90,000,000 worth of radium, its structure the result of discovery of a new electrical principle, was announced here today.

This tube was made for treatment of human cancer, but is also designed for industry, and gives both a new weapon. In cancer it furnishes an amperage, or volume of current, far in excess of anything previously known.

For industry it is the first of these million-volt giants that can be carried on a truck. Such rays, useful for looking through steel, have been available only for "jobs" which could be transported to them.

Can Peek Into Steel

But the million-volt "eye" could be backed up to a structure like the Empire State Building, or taken inside, and could peek into the interior of the huge steel, concrete and stone foundations that carry the load of the world's tallest skyscraper.

The tube was built by scientists of the General Electric Co.'s research laboratory for installation by the General Electric X-Ray Corporation. It will be placed this spring in the new $4,000,000 Memorial Hospital, now nearing completion at Sixty-eighth street and York avenue, New York City. This hospital is designed to be the world's most completely equipped cancer institute.

The director of cancer work, James Ewing, Md., one of the Nation's ranking cancer scientists, said today the great amperage will be useful to try on "resistant" types of cancer.

"No one," he explained, "knows what the effect will be because no such amperage has been available."

The amperage is around 10 times that usually available, and can be run up to 100, although on humans a much smaller current is required than this maximum. Another advantage of the great rays is their "coolness," something already demonstrated on the half dozen other types of million-volt tubes in this country.

The completed tube is a steel pill box less than a man's height, with a lead tail projecting from its bottom. This tail is the lower end of a lead-encased bottle, which is the vacuum tube in which the rays are made. The bottle is 4 feet, 8 inches long, much of it housed inside the pill box.

Uses Ordinary Current

The tail is the working end, where the rays come out for human use and industrial photography.

The new electrical principle enables this tube to use ordinary low frequency current. That is, it could be plugged in on an ordinary 60-cycle electric light socket.

In Memorial Hospital, Dr. Ewing said, the walls of the room for the new tube will be concrete, 2 feet thick.

The first giant tube, 10 years ago, developing only 500,000-volt X-rays, at California Institute of Technology, was nearly three stories high. In 1933 General Electric made an 800,000-volt tube which required a room 62 feet long, 32 wide and 36 high.

It is claimed this most recent tube can be put in any hopsital without erecting a new plant, annex or expensive alteration of a room.

Women, Given $7 At Party, Is Slain

Philadelphia, Jan. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Julia Juhasz, 70, was beaten to death today in an alley she passed walking home alone from a New Year party.

Detectives said her assailant apparently was frightened away before he could strip rings from her fingers or take from her purse $7 that had been collected at the party as a gift for her.

Mrs. Juhasz, active for many years in Hungarian-American organizations, left the party at the hall of the Philadelphia Working-Men's Singing Society, which she helped found in 1908, shortly after midnight. After rejecting offers to accompany her.

me of fraud and chiseling by relief clients here."

Ringgold Hart, chairman of the advistory committee, created under act of Congress providing for the local relief investigation, declared the committee "purposely refrained" from submitting the report, before publication, to the Board of Public Welfare for review. He referred to the statement by Frederick W. McReynolds, board chairman, that the board should have had an opportunity to "correct errors."

It was learned that Lewis, in his charge some time ago that reports of local relief needs were exaggerated, referred to "the failure in listing the number of rejections to disclose that a substantial portion were repeaters."

Hart said "the reason the report was not first submitted to the Board of Public Welfare was that the board was being investigated." He added:

"We purposely refrainde from doing htis. This was an investigation, not a survey.

"At the same time, we felt it was necessary to give board members an an opportunity to be heard. They were called into my office several weeks ago and were given an opportunity to present their views. I intsructed Mr. Lewis, in preparing his report, to give careful consideration to what they had to present.

Publication Voted

"Publication of the report likewise purposely decided upon in order to get before the people the things which the director of the investigation and his staff found in the course of an investigation lasting from April 28 to December 1.

Our idea was that the whole thing should have an airing. We were anxious to get the thing out and find out what the reaction would be."

He explained that the committee did not assume responsibility for the factual or other information presented by Lewis. The sole function of the advisory committee, he explained, was to surprise the investigation and see that it was conducted according to the statutory provisions. The committee, he said, approved members of Lewis' staff.

King related how a taxicab driver had informed him a relief client had been sent to the Lorton Reformatory. During the prisoner's term his relief checks continued to arrive by mail. When he was released, he came home and cashed the accumulated checks.

Hanover Refuses to Ban Sunday Sale of Beer

Ashland, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—The Hanover Board of Supervisors today refused to prohibit the Sunday sale of wine and beer in the county. The request was laid before the board at its last meeting by a group of ministers.

The supervisors took the position that it would do no good to ban such sales in Hanover while beer and wine were sold on Sunday in adjoining counties. Hanover lies near Richmond.

65 Floast Thrill Crowd In Five-Mile Parade; Burbank Wins Prize

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 2.—More than a million persons jammed downtown streets today as Pasadena presented for the fiftieth time its annual Tournament of Roses.

The theme on this half-century anniversary was "Golden Memories" and it was carried outin 65 flower covered floats which made a procession 5 miles long.

Shirley Temple, golden-haired screen starlet, was grand marshal of the parade, riding on a throne of white gardenias, based on deep red roses. Barbara Dougall, Junior College co-ed, reigned queen of the flower tournament, attended by six princesses.

Burbank, last year's sweepstakes winner, repeated with "Tallyho of 1889," a rose and lavender coach drown by four prancing, snow white horses, appeared to be traveling along a great white road bordered with rose chrysanthemums and purple stock. The harness, bridles and traces were made of blue bachelor buttons in spectacular contrast against the sleek coats of the make-believe animals.

Oakland's "Treasure Island" won the theme prize with its float of 750,000 blossoms dramatizing the 1939 San Francisco World Fair. Capt. John Silver was seated in the midst of a huge net carried by four giant sea horses. Near him was a large treasure chest made in a gigantic mass of flower fantasy.

A float depicting the drilling of the first oil well in California 60 years ago won the grand prize for the Standard Oil Co.

State Jobless Benefits Drop 21% in Month

Decrease Started in August; $10,000 Less Paid in District

By the Associated Press.

The social Security Board reported yesterday that benefits paid by State unemployment compensation agencies in November showed the greatest drop since they began declining in August.

The November payments were $28,000,000, a decline of 21 per cent from October.

Twenty of the 29 States paying benefits reported reductions ranging from 2.1 per cent in Maryland to nearly 36 per cent in Michigan.

D. C. Total Is $1,515,643

An increase in Maine was held due largely to a reduction in backlogs of compensable claims.

The payments in November, October and the total during January-November (in that order) included:

States besides Michigan reporting a reduction of 20 per cent or more included Alabama, Indiana, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia. Those reporting reductions of between 10 and 20 per cent were Arizona, Massachusets, Minnesota, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah and Wisconsin.

Idaho Gain Greatest

Idaho had the largest gain, which the board said was customary for States beginning their payments. Idaho started its payments in September.

Seasonal conditions contributing to a marked rise in unemployment were held responsible by the board for substantial increases in payments in Oregon.

While benefit payments declined sharply, the number of initial claims for benefits increased 2.3 per cent during November, the second successive month in which an expansion in the volume of initial claims was registered. Sixteen States reported increases ranging from 0.8 per cent in Virginia to 44.3 per cent in Iowa. Other States reporting increases of 20 per cent or more were Idaho, Minnesota, Mississippi, and Utah.

2 Women Victims Of Blood Disease Hold Their Own

Washington's two victims of streptococcus viridans septicemia, dangerous blood infection, were reported "holding their own" last night while physicians awaited the outcome of blood transfusions.

Mrs. Walter B. Matheny, 32, of 1767 Lanier place northwest, latest to fall victim of the rare malady, was given a transfusion yesterday by Dr. Oscar Hunter. The blood was donated by Mrs. Edward J. Gimpel, of 3713 Twenty-fourth street northeast, who recovered from the infection.

Dr. Hunter said his patient was "reacting as well as could be expected."

Mrs. Edna Diehl, 26, of 647 Maine avenue southwest, reported "about the same," received a transfusion from Mrs. Gimpel Sunday.

Harry Rosenfeld Dies At Palm Beach Home

Maniacs Intend To Kill 3, Says Captured Pal

First of Five Fleeing Madmen Surrenders Without Fight, Unarmed

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 2.—Russell Nuckles, 25, one of five dangerously insane criminals who escaped yesterday from the Lima, Ohio, State Hospital after overpowering and beating four guards, was captured here today.

He said three of his comrades were en route to Chicago to kill the leader's wife and a couple of policemen before going into big time robbery. The other planned to flee to Denver, said Knuckles.

Although the five were armed with razors, a hatchet and iron clubs when they escaped, Nuckles was unarmed and surrendered without resistance. An alert detective, Sergt. James J. McDonald, who several months ago arrested Nuckles for participation in a series of holdups of "spooners" in a city park, was responsible for the convict's capture today.

Chicago Robber Is Leader

McDonald saw Nuckles on a downtown street. He and three other detectives stopped their cruiser and McDonald arrested Nuckles. He quoted Nuckles as saying Frank Haines, of Chicago, was leader of the break and that Nuckles left the four, in a stolen automobile, at Fort Wayne, Ind., and rode a freight car to Cleveland.

Haines said he was going to Chicago first to kill his wife and a couple of cops he didn't like and then they were going into big-time robbery," Nuckles was quoted by McDonald.

Dark Lanes Held Perilous

Only Marion Pierce, Indianapolis colored man, did not figure in the "big-time robbery" plans, Nuckles said. Pierce intended to flee to Denver, said the captured fugitive.

Haines is under a 10-25-year sentence for robbing a filling station and Pierce was serving an identical term for shooting to wound. William Brucks, Ohio slayer, and William Blatz, native of Maine who was serving a 10-25-year robbery term, are the others still at large.

All were barefooted when they escaped. Nuckles wore an oversize pair of shoes which he said he obtained in Fort Wayne. Hospital officials described the four as "very dangerous and very violent" and State police warned town and farm people to avoid dark lanes and other places where they might be attacked.

'Sex-Slayer' Admits Confession a Hoax

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 2 (AP).—James Leo Smith, itinerant laborer, admitted today his voluntary "confession" of the Minneapolis sex-slaying of Laura Kruse was a hoax, police stated.

The development came two days after Minneapolis and St. Paul policemen, who came here to question Smith, expressed disbelief in his story. Smith will be booked for vagrancy and held for observation.

U. S. Mediation Board Achieves Record for '38

Settles More Labor Disputes Than in Any Previous Year

The National Mediation Board, according to its fourth annual report to Congress yesterday, consummated more agreements by mediation last year than ever before in its history. Not a single interruption of rail or air line service because of labor disputes occurred.

The board consists of Otto S. Beyer, chairman for the year 1937-38; William M. Leiserson, chairman for the year 1938-39, and George A. Cook.

It reported not only successful mediation but also a growing number of cases settled in direct negotiation between the parties concerned.

Points in Report

The board's report makes the following points:

"1. No interruptions of rail and air line service occurred during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938, on account of labor disputes. The record for the year is thus better than that for the previous year when two minor stoppages and one serious strike did occur.

"2. Great credit is due both the railroads and the labor organizations for their ability and willingness to negotiate and mediate under the provisions of the railway labor act on a national scale.

"3. Collective bargaining has made rapid progress in the air transport industry, which was made subject to the jurisdiction of the mediation board by amendments to the railwal labor act in 1936. Fourteen labor agreements covering rates of pay, rules and working conditions applying to airline employes were filed with the board by June 30, 1938.

Agreements Cited

"4. Reversing the trend of the previous year on the railroads, an increase in inter-union disputes as to who may represent employes for the purposes of the railway labor act occurred during the year 1937-38.

"5. Activities of the board resulted in consummating more agreements by mediation than ever before in its history. Included in these mediation settlements were two affecting more employes and more carriers, and involving a larger sum total of adjustments in pay roll expenses than in any other case mediated since the enactment of the railway labor act in 1926.

"6. The number of signed agreements covering rates of pay, rules, and working conditions of railroad employes in the files of the board now is 4,039—an increase of 207 over the preceding year."

The board requested a larger personnel to expedite cases.

Murphy Sworn on Bible Mother Gave Him in 1908 Which He Says He Has Read an Hour a Day Ever Since tomorrow. It will be referred, Ashhurst said, to the Judiciary Committee, and by the committee to a subcommittee consisting of five or seven members.

Although a number of Senators, including conservative Democrats, expressed private dissatisfaction with the appointment, there was no open disapproval. "I know of no Senator," Ashhurst said, "who intends to oppose the nomination."

"No Need" of Hurry

"The committee, in considering the nomination," he said, "will follow its customary poetic policy of no haste, no hurry. There is no need of any."

Indications were that a demand would be made for hearings by the Senate judiciary sub-committee on the way in which Murphy handled the Michigan sit-down strikes, and that possibly certain Democrats who did not win the President's blessing in the last election would join in this move.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, who was victorious despite the fact that the Administration turned "thumbs down" on him, said:

"I know nothing that would be unfavorable to Murphy."

"I would imagine, however, that the Senate would wish to have information on his handling of the sit-down strikes."

Ashurst said he was sure Murphy would be glad to answer questions which Senators might wish to ask him about the sit-down strikes.

In the swearing-in ceremony, Murphy opened the Bible to a text marked by his mother, and took the oath to uphold the Constitution with his hand over the marked portion of the page.

The text, consisting of the fourth and fifth verses, chapter 11, of the book of Isaiah, follows:

"But He shall judge the poor with justice and shall reprove with equity the meek of the earth.

"And justice shall be the girdle of his loins; and faith the girdle of his reins."

Visibly affected, Murphy told reporters waiting in the lobby of the White House executive offices that he considered the text "particularly appropriate these days."

The Bible, which Murphy says he has read an hour a day ever since he received it, bears the following inscription:

"To dear Frank from Mama on the day he graduated, June 26, 1908."

The new Attorney General has used this Bible before at swearing-in ceremonies. It was used when he took the oath as Mayor of Detroit.

Murphy, regarded as one of President Roosevelt's closest advisers and friends, was defeated for re-election to the Michigan Governorship in November by Frank D. Fitzgerald, Republican.

The Attorney Generalship is the third important post which he has received at Roosevelt's hands. He was the last Governor General of the Philippines and the first High Commissioner under the Philippine independence act.

His appointment is in line with Roosevelt's policy of realigning the Cabinet to present a more compact New Deal phalanx to opponents in Congress at this session.

Harry L. Hopkins, former Works Progress Administrator, was named recently to succeed Daniel C. Roper as Secretary of Commerce. In a similar White House ceremony Christmas Eve, Hopkins took the oath on a Bible given him by Roosevelt as a Christmas present.

Scorning the long coat and striped trousers customarily used for such occasions, Murphy appeared for the swearing-in dressed in a double-breasted blue business suit.

He arrived yesterday morning by train, accompanied by Mrs. Marguerite Teahan, a sister, Judge George Murphy of the Recorder's Court of Detroit, his brother, and close friends. All were present at the ceremony. Murphy is a bachelor. Mrs. Teahan is his hostess.

As he left the train, he was greeted with a kiss by Miss Ann Parker, daughter of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, who served with him when he was Governor General of the Philippines.

Murphy was closeted with the President an hour before the ceremony. At his first press conference, held in the office of Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, he said he would take over his new job this morning after a conference with Cummings.

Two of Murphy's assistants at Manila and at the Statehouse in Lansing will be given posts in the Justice Department. They are Edward G. Kemp, a legal adviser, and Miss Eleanor Baumgardner, Murphy's secretary for the last five years.

Miss Alice M. Fields. Police said she had gone to New York to get a job with the WPA audit education project, though friends in Washington thought it possible she had sought her husband, Donald Corley, an architect, from whom she had been separated for two years. Corley had worked in Washington but was believed to have gone to New York.

For the last three days, Miss Fields told police, she had not seen Mrs. Corley so she got a pass key and let herself into the apartment. She found Mrs. Corley, wearing a silk nightgown, stretched across the bed. A penciled "do not disturb" sign was tacked on the door.

There were several boxes of medicine in the room in addition to the sleeping tablets, indicating Mrs. Corley was under a physician's care. Among her effects was a master of arts diploma from Duke. Mrs. Corley, She got a pass key from Shelby, N. C., and who was a member of the class of 1927, had been employed at the council for 11 years.

"We had regarded her with very high esteem," an official of the organization said last night. "She was one of the most efficient members of our secretarial staff."

He said a letter was necessary to make her telegraphic resignation official.

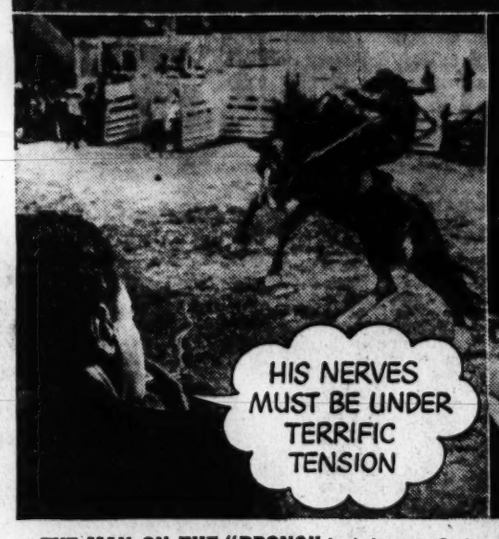
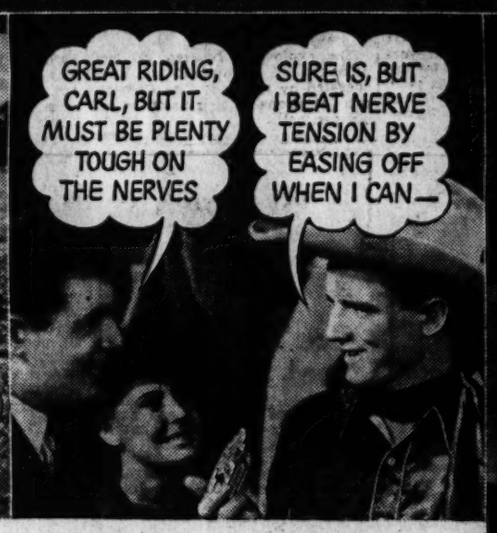
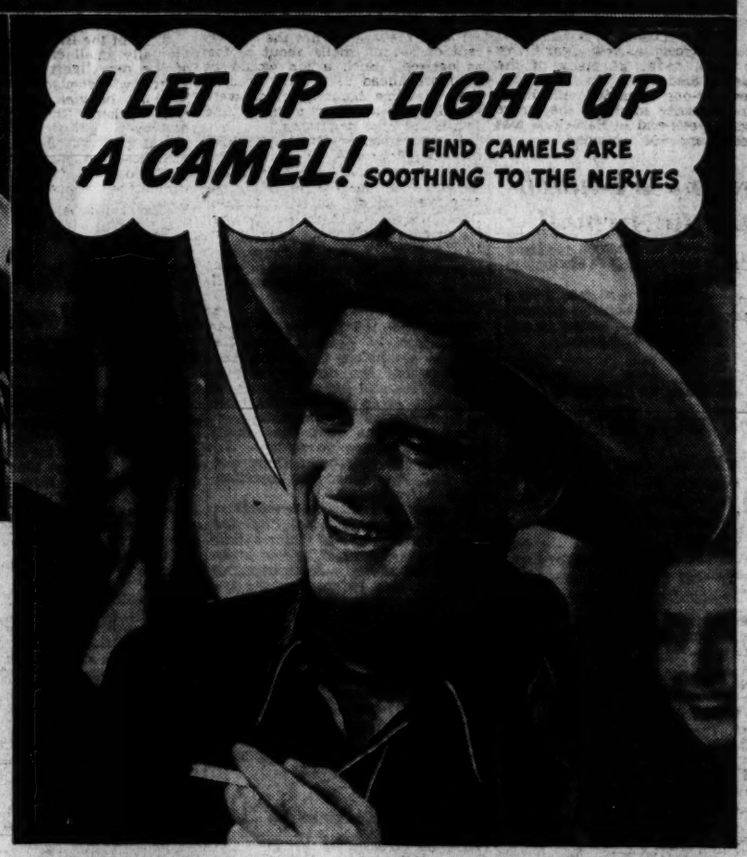
NERVE STRAIN APLENTY—BUT NO JITTERY NERVES FOR CARL DOSSEY—CHAMPIONSHIP COWBOY AND STAR OF THE RODEO





THE MAN ON THE "BRONC" is Arizona's Carl Dossey, winner of two bareback championships in California and a high-point cowboy title at the big Utah show. Here is Carl at New York's Madison Square Garden in a thrilling stunt depending on split-second timing, perfect nerve control. Is it a strain? Carl says: "One hour of rip-snortin' around the ring puts more strain on the nerves than a whole day of punchin' cows. My nerves would be plenty tense, jittery if I didn't rest 'em every chance I get. My way is to let up—light up a Camel. Camels are mighty comforting."



YOU CAN TELL by Carl Dossey's big smile that while he's resting his nerves—letting up and lighting up a Camel—he's also enjoying the mildness and rich flavor of a supremely enjoyable cigarette—finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS!

LOOK TO THE DOG FOR A VALUABLE HINT ON NERVE STRAIN

Copyright, 1939, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

THE ENGLISH SPRINGER SPANIEL (above) is speedy, agile. He has a highly developed nervous system. In fact, it's remarkably similar to our own... complex, sensitive. But, unlike so many humans, this dog doesn't ABUSE his nerves. Nor does any dog. When a dog feels tired, he rests INSTINCTIVELY! We humans often let our will-power whip us on, deaf to the warning that nerves are getting jittery, frayed. Yet how much more pleasant and profitable life can be when nerves are rested now and then. Try it... pause when you get the chance... LET UP—LIGHT UP A CAMEL! You'll welcome the pleasant comfort of Camel's mildness—rich, ripe flavor. Smokers find Camel's costlier tobaccos soothing to the nerves.

(left) STORE MANAGER William A. Knox's life is a lot different from Carl Dossey's, but there's plenty of nerve strain in it. "I'm on the jump all the livelong day," he says, "but it's my regular rule to break nerve tension by taking short recesses—letting up and lighting up a mild, soothing Camel."

(right) RECORD-HOLDING woman parachute jumper, Marie McMillin, knows the nerve strain of stepping out into thin air—4 miles up! She says: "I protect my nerves from tension by giving them frequent rests—I let up—light up a Camel. Camels are really soothing, comforting to my nerves."

Franco Leads Crack Troops In 12-Mile Gain

Loyalist Port Menaced, Rebels Claim, in Catalonian Drive

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 2.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco today personally led his crack Navarrese troops through a labyrinth of mountain peaks in a 12-mile advance to within 25 miles of the loyalist seaport of Tarragona on the Mediterranean, his field headquarters at Lerida announced.

Fighting from peak to peak in the rocky escarpments of the Montsant Mountains north of the Ebro River, the Navarrese reported the capture of five important towns on the southern flank of the 90-mile Catalonian front.

At Gratallops, control point for four highways, the insurgents were reported to be only 6 miles from the government's steel and concrete defense lines outside Falset, 20 miles from Tarragona.

7,000 Loyalists Slain

Insurgents estimated that since the Catalonian offensive began on December 23, 7,000 loyalists have been killed, 16,000 captured or 25,000 wounded, 100 enemy planes shot down and 675 square miles of territory taken. Loyalists insisted enemy casualties were greater than theirs.

Insurgent communiques reported the capture of 2,000 loyalists in the Monsant Range during the swift advance which threatened to cut the 20-mile strip of highway from Falset to Tarragona.

A loyalist communique issued at Barcelona at 11 p. m. admitted the insurgents were advancing across the Montsant peaks and had occupied a number of heights, but only at the cost of enormous losses.

Claims Rebels Repulsed

On all other sectors of the Catalonian front, the loyalists said, enemy attacks were thrown back during the day, particularly around Cubells and Baldoma to the north and south of the government's Artesa de Segre base on the northern flank.

Franco was said by his Lerida base to have spent the past 48 hours in the front lines of the southern sector, directing the operations of the 12 miles forward thrust.

One of the key Loyalist points which fell to Franco during the day was Juncosa, a highway town walled on the east by the Llena Mountains, 16 miles north of Falset and 18 miles south of Lerida.

Between Juncosa and Falset Franco's headquarters reported that during the past 24 hours the insurgent southern forces had captured La Figuera Vilella Alta, Cabaces and Margalef.

Sixty-one Killed by Bombs

Barcelona, Jan. 2 (AP).—The death toll of the insurgent bombing of central Barcelona New Year's Eve rose to 61 today as many of the wounded died.

Seventy-one wounded still lived. The casualty total for the entire holiday week-end in Barcelona was 71 dead and 104 wounded.

Britons to Launch Atlantic Airmail Service in June

London, Jan. 2 (AP).—Regular weekly transatlantic airmail service, forerunner of a 21-hour England-New York passenger service, will start before June between Southampton and Montreal, Imperial Airways announced today.

The British company announced it was ready to begin the service with four 24-ton flying boats, traveling via Foynes, Ireland, and Botwood, Newfoundland, as soon as the Botwood harbor is clear of ice. The total distance over the plotted route is 3,563 miles.

Permission to land in New York has not been granted but the company said "we are negotiating for a permit to extend the service to New York and expect to have it by the time service begins."

Beginning with a weekly service, two flights weekly each way are planned for later in the summer. The planes will make the East-West ocean crossing in about 16 hours. New York would be about 21 hours. West-to-East times will be about three hours less.

The big flying boats at first will carry about 6,000 pounds of mail and later up to 18 passengers, after the schedule has been tested.

said, was the largest in peace-time history.

Rockets were suggested by an Army officer yesterday as "gunless artillery" for bombarding cities from great distances in any future war.

American scientists already have overcome some of the practical problems in developing this weapon, Maj. James R. Randolph of the Ordnance Reserve wrote in the periodical Army Ordnance.

Other experts are reported at work in Germany and Russia, he added.

"In the present state of the art," Randolph said, "there probably would be no great difficulty in equaling with rockets the performance of the German long range gun that bombarded Paris from a distance of 75 miles.

Could Fire Rapidly

"But instead of firing shots of moderate caliber in long intervals, a rocket plant could fire the equivalent of 24-inch shells about as fast as desired. Such a job would be no more ahead of present practice than wartime bombing raids were ahead of the airplanes in 1913. And this is only the beginning."

As one advance, Randolph noted that Dr. Robert H. Goddard, who directed research for the War Department in the World War, has employed liquid ozygen and gasoline instead of smokeless powder in recent spectacular experiments in the West.

Other problems, such as aiming the rocket, are not insoluble, he contended.

"The fact that the rocket's firing device would probably cost less than 1 per cent of the cost of an equivalent cannon would enable a much larger number to be fired at once," Randolph said.

"When a fortified position is to be reduced by cannon, the bombardment often last for several days, giving the enemy ample time to bring up re-enforcements. With rockets, the whole artillery preparation would probably be shot off atonce, or in several volleys."

British Plan More Destroyers

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 2.—Naval estimates for the coming year to be submitted to Parliament in February are expected, it was learned today, to call for the construction of a score or more of fast destroyers as an answer to Germany's decision to increase her strength in submarines to a position of parity with the British.

Hector C. Bywater, naval correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, points out that at the outbreak of the war in 1914, Britain had 357 destroyers and torpedo boats built and building, to take care of less than 40 submarines ready for use by the enemy powers.

Today Britain has 178 destroyers, some unfinished and many obsolete, while the "triangle powers, Germany, Italy and Japan together possess 264 submarines, not including the additional 45,000 tons which Germany proposes to build.

"You can't fight submarines with submarines," says the admiralty, and it is anticipated that authority to build 24 to 30 more destroyers will be sought. The navy could even use 50 more, if they could be had. In any event, the British should have well over 200 destroyers in a few years.

Some of the British destroyers are virtually small cruisers. Destroyers of the new lightning class, for instance, will displace 1,920 tons each, 30 tons heavier than the Tribal type, hitherto the biggest British destroyer. However, the navy would be satisfied with a flock of medium-sized destroyers around 1,000 tons, to cope with the growing submarine menace.

Would Aid Hitler

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Germany's proposal to build up her submarine tonnage to a parity with Great Britain's would add to Adolf Hitler's war machine only weapons which, like airplanes, are of secondary usefulness in actual combat.

But airplanes and submarines might prove to be decisive factors in the demoralization of Great Britain in any war with Germany.

Though submarines did not sink a ship of Britain's grand fleet during the World War, they did establish an almost successful starvation blockade of the isles. Moreover, submarines severely inhibited the movements of the fleet.

Keeping open her sea lanes for raw materials and food would be vital to Britain in any future war, as it was in the World War.

Yomada Made Japan's Army Chief in China

Shift Foreshadows Antiguerrilla Drive, Foreigners Believe

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Jan. 2.—General Shunroku Hata, commander of Japanese forces in China since February 23, 1938, and the conqueror of Hankow, relinquished his command and departed for Tokyo today.

Lieut. Gen. Otozo Yamada, 57, former commander of the Japanese twelfth division, was appointed to succeed him and immediately took command.

General Hata's departure was considered by many foreign observers here as foreshadowing a definite change in Japanese tactics in China. They held that major military operations have been completed and that the campaign henceforth would be directed at wiping out Guerrilla fighters and pacifying partially conquered regions.

Blockade of French Intensified

Messages from Hankow reported a Japanese blockade of the French concession there was becoming more intense, with motorboat patrols halting all vessels attempting to land food.

Industrial plants in Hankow received official Japanese encouragement to reopen but a lack of workers hampered operations. The resumed work but at only one-fifth of normal production.

Meanwhile it was said former Premier Wang Ching-Wei, who was expelled from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's regime yesterday, had been prepared for the move for some time.

Chiang Beat Wang Before

Wang was expelled from the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) and relieved of all official positions for "deserting his post and suing for peace (with Japan) in contradiction to national policy."

It was the latest of several breaks between Wang and Chiang, who were the two favorite disciples of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the Chinese republic. The first came soon after Sun's death in 1925, when Chiang, the military leader, won out over Wang, the political leader, in the race for Sun's mantle.

It was believed likely here that Wang would take another trip abroad, as he did then. Local rumors that he was due in Shanghai en route to Nanking or Peiping were discounted. It was believed he would go abroad from Hanoi, where he went from Chunking, and where he presumably still is staying.

Crowds Fight to See Premier

In both Ajaccio and Bastia crowds broke away from the gendarmes and police and fought in the street for an opportunity to cheer the premier. They wrestled with Senegalese and Tunisian sharpshooters who were forced to sheathe their bayonets to prevent casualties.

The demonstrations were not confined to Corsica's two main towns. While Daladier made the trip from Ajaccio to Bastia aboard the cruiser Foch, the prefect, as the government's representative on the island, made a triumphal railroad trip across the snow-covered mountain ranges.

The populations of mountain villages lined the railroad tracks as gendarmes in their isolated posts stood at attention.

At Daladier's departure for Tunis the Foch was escorted by the cruiser Colbert and the third destroyer division. The cruiser Suffren remained to take Navy Minister Campinchi and his suite back to Toulon, which they left last night with Daladier.

Genoese Rule Recalled

Italy, whose campaign for a share in the French Empire prompted the premier's tour, was not mentioned in Daladier's quiet, confident words, but the people made them apply to fascism with their cries and the squadron of warships and planes flying overhead lent emphasis to his visit.

At Bastia the premier was welcomed by Mayor de Montera, who said: "Five centuries of Genoese oppression have failed to detach us from France, to which we belong." It was an indirect comparison of ancient Italian efforts to rule Corsica and modern Fascist claims on the island. Daladier, replying briefly, said "whatever province we belong to, we are first of all French."

Daladier's schedule called for him to travel overnight across the Mediterranean to Tunisia for the second major stage of his voyage.

The military aspects of his trip will be given more emphasis upon his arrival at Bizerta, Tunisia, at 7:45 a. m. There he will review a detachment of colonial troops immediately and inspect coast defenses before proceeding to Tunis.

Pittman Proposes Ostracizing Japan For War on China

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night proposed that the United States "ostracize" Japan if she continues actions against which the State Department has protested.

He said that he cannot conceive a declaration of war by the Japanese government against this Nation as result of any moral sanctions of this type which the United States might level in the interest of international "justice."

London, Jan. 2 (AP).—British officialdom gave approval today to the tone and substance of the note delivered to Japan Saturday by the United States, denying Japan's right to set up a "new order" in China to the detriment of American treaty rights. In quarters close to the Government it was said that "Britain's views are not dissimilar to those expressed by the United States." It was understood, however, that Britain would not send a similar communication to Tokyo.

Daladier Digs In

Before he left Paris for Corsica on New Year's Day, Premier Daladier scored what was, perhaps, his most significant victory.

On five successive occasions, in the course of a tumultuous all-night debate on the 1939 budget, M. Daladier demanded a vote of confidence. Each time the Chamber came through with a majority of at least 100 in his favor. And each time this majority consisted of a coalition of Right and Center parties, plus the Radical Socialists voting solidly with the Conservatives. The opposition was made up exclusively of the Socialist and Communist rump of the Popular Front.

It is apparent, therefore, that the Popular Front has now been completely smashed. The disintegration of this combination of Leftist parties, swept into power by the election of 1936, is now complete. And in forming a successful government of National Union, without another election and without left-wing support, M. Daladier has accomplished what many thought to be a political impossibility.

Coming at this time, moreover, the development has a special importance. In the first place M. Daladier's new majority enables him to proceed with the indispensable task of financial and economic reform and the restoration of confidence. And, with the Chamber supporting him, M. Daladier is in a position firmly to reject Italian demands for the cession of French colonial territory.

Indeed, the very circumstance that his own party has split with the Socialists and Communists makes it the more necessary that the present government pursue a firm foreign policy in line with the Popular Front program. To capitulate to Italy on the colonial issue or the Spanish issue, for instance, would give momentum to the elements within the Radical Socialist Party which are not altogether reconciled to the dissolution of the Popular Front partnership.

M. Daladier himself is anything but averse to a strong policy. His visit to Corsica and Tunisia is obviously designed to consolidate the French empire and to assure Frenchmen, as well as Italians, that what belongs to France she will not yield under threats. But France must be strong in fact as well as in intent.

The test of M. Daladier's policy will be whether, through his new majority, he will be able to increase French productivity, lure back capital which has taken flight abroad, keep the franc stable and get the budget balanced. For the moment all that can be said is that he has made an excellent start.

Honors Easy

There is something pathetically ironic in the award of the Order of St. Michael and St. George to Basil Cochrane Newton, British Minister to Prague, even though this was only one of a thousand titles and decorations handed out by King George in the annual New Year's honors list.

Sir Basil is an able diplomat with a long and honorable record in the service of the British crown. There is no doubt that he deserves recognition by his monarch and it is probable that no statesman had a more unpleasant task during the past year than fell to his lot. It was his melancholy duty to present the Franco-British ultimatum to President Benes of Czecho-Slovakia in the early morning hours of September 21. Ten days later, as a direct consequence of that ultimatum, the partition of Czecho-Slovakia was begun.

For this development no blame rests with Sir Basil himself. He did only what was expected of him; he obeyed orders. But the episode with which he will forever be identified was hardly in the heroic tradition of either St. Michael or St. George. The British role during the Czecho-Slovak crisis was not that of the archangel with the shining sword, who kept Lucifer at bay, nor that of the heroic slayer of the dragon. On the contrary the Munich crisis left the dragon very much alive.

If any more participants in the Czecho-Slovak crisis are to be honored it might be more appropriate to confer the Order of the Bath, which suggests purification, or the Order of the Garter, which requires stooping.

A Vital Session

The Seventy-sixth Congress, convening today, has before it opportunities and responsibilities far greater than those which normally await this legislative body.

It will be the first duty of the Congress to reassert its constitutional position as an independent, critical and competent organ of government. That this re-establishment of Congressional authority is the will of the sovereign electorate was clearly demonstrated last November. There is one conclusion that must be drawn from the fact that the elections almost doubled Republican strength in the House and increased it by just over one-third in the Senate. Clearly the country wants a stronger opposition party.

A stronger opposition in the past would probably have saved the present Congress much of the work which lies before it. In several instances, notably the Labor Relations Act, the relief program and the AAA, demands for revision spring from legislative deficiencies which could have been averted by better drafting. It is helpful to no interest, least of all to the Administration, to confront in the upshot tangles and difficulties which preliminary thought might easily have prevented.

The Republican opposition will undoubtedly have two thoughts continually in mind during the coming session. In the first place it must recognize that permanent changes have taken place in the past six years, and that any attitude of narrow obstructionism will be regarded by the country as being plain reaction. At the same time the opposition must emphasize that the emergency period is over, and that the specious plea of urgency can no longer be used in support of dubious political nostrums. Republican chances in 1940 will depend in no small measure on the discrimination of that party's representatives in the Seventy-sixth Congress. They have the difficult problem of differentiating between the consolidation of overdue social gains and the undermining of traditional American principles.

This Congress will have enormous responsibility, implicit and explicit, in the conduct of foreign relations. On its attitude in this increasingly vital subject may, in the last analysis, depend the issue of peace or war. In general the Congress would do well to realize that the Administration is very intelligently informed and highly competent professionally in the fields of both defense and diplomacy. Moreover, these are functions in which our policy is largely controlled by the actions of other countries, making it imperative that the Executive should have a relatively free hand.

Party lines have no place in the consideration of foreign policy. In domestic affairs they should never be drawn with a view to narrow political advantage, but on a carefully formulated attitude toward national welfare, regarded as a long-range as well as an immediate problem. Division on these issues will not and should not always coincide with political labels. The ideal legislator is the one who, with due regard to the importance of party discipline, will work and vote in accordance with well-reasoned convictions, the possession of which alone can make him a worthy spokesman for his constituency.

This spirit of thoughtful independence may be expected in a Congress which contains well over a hundred new faces, and in which there are also many veterans who could never be classified as rubber stamps. In addition the trend of the times emphasizes the need for Congressmen who can think on a national rather than on a purely partisan and parochial basis. Congress, like any other human institution, must learn to adapt itself to changing conditions while remaining true to enduring principles.

The sum of the attitudes of individual legislators will determine the success of the Seventy-sixth Congress in confronting the problems which lie ahead. The responsibility is personal as well as collective. The fact that representative government is under fire as never before; the fact that institutions survive only as long as they prove worthy of survival, should be in the minds of every Congressman as the gavels fall in the House and Senate today.

The Attorney General

The appointment of former Gov. Murphy to the post of Attorney General in the President's Cabinet would provoke less criticism had it not closely followed the selection of former WPA Administrator Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce. Considered together, the appointments seem to represent a rather pronounced disregard of public opinion on the part of the President.

Under our system of government the Chief Executive has virtually complete discretion in selecting the members of his Cabinet. It is true that they must be confirmed by the Senate. But the Senate seldom rejects such a nominee. It properly recognizes the confirmation procedure as merely a check against the appointment of persons unfit for high Federal office. Since Mr. Murphy is obviously competent, no fight against his confirmation is to be anticipated.

It does not follow that Mr. Roosevelt made a wise choice. As Governor of Michigan Mr. Murphy suffered an emphatic repudiation in November. The President's assistance could not save him. Yet in spite of that rebuke on an issue of law enforcement (the Governor's handling of the sit-down strikes seemed to be the chief issue in the campaign), he is promoted to head the Federal Government's law-enforcement agency.

The part which the WPA, under Mr. Hopkins' administration, played in the recent political campaigns resulted in perhaps even more hostile public reaction. When the President elevates two severely criticized officials to Cabinet posts, his attitude toward public opinion seems scarcely to square with that advanced in many of his speeches.

One other consideration, entirely aside from Gov. Murphy's qualifications for this post, is his close friendship with the President. When the position in question is the Attorney Generalship an appointment tinged with personal considerations leaves something to be desired. This office calls for an eminent and independent constitutional lawyer who is not only competent to advise the Chief Executive on fundamental legal issues but is also in a position to differ with him if the need arises

Had such a man been Attorney General in 1937 the ill-fated scheme to reorganize the Supreme Court would never have been launched. In appointing Mr. Murphy the President has placed on him the responsibility of remembering that the path of true friendship is never that of personal subserviency.

The Lewis Report

Any honest and comprehensive investigation of relief in the District would doubtless raise a controversy. No faultless system of giving aid to the handicapped and unemployed has yet been devised. For that very reason differing opinions as to the Burdette G. Lewis report should not be permitted to obscure its fundamental value.

Mr. Lewis has perhaps foolishly antagonized some officials by his sharp and vigorous criticism. It is not that characteristic of his report which makes it significant. Indeed, these charges of incompetency are unfortunate insofar as they detract from his major theme—the need for a new relief system. The larger issue is in no sense personal. It concerns the co-ordination of social welfare agencies and the adoption of safeguards that will stop chiseling and insure the distribution of relief funds where they are most needed.

Some critics of Mr. Lewis have been thoroughly disarmed by his report. They had assumed that he would recommend a curtailment of relief outlays. On the contrary, he thinks more money will be needed "to permit the proper organization of existing services" even after present waste has been eliminated. "It is the old story over again," he reports, "the few are getting more than their share and the many are getting too little." His aim of readjusting benefits to actual needs must be approved without qualification.

It is interesting to note, moreover, that in several instances Elwood Street, director of public welfare, indorses the advice of Mr. Lewis. That is particularly noticeable in connection with Mr. Lewis' plea for more case workers. The Board of Public Welfare has frequently complained that waste and fraud can not be entirely prevented so long as the average employe must look after 185 cases. Responsibility for this lies squarely upon the shoulders of Congress.

Of even greater concern is the utter lack of co-ordination among the relief agencies serving the District. Mr. Lewis points out that laws in this field have been enacted piecemeal with little attempt to reconcile one with another. The result is overlapping functions, waste motion, unnecessary expense and frequent injustice to the recipients of relief.

To overcome this confusion and inefficient management Mr. Lewis suggests that the separate acts be "worked into a code" and that a "consolidated department of employment and social security" be organized. That department would include the Employment Center, the District Unemployment Compensation Board, the District WPA, the Self-Help Exchange and the Board of Public Welfare. The need for reorganization along this line is obvious. Before any bill is submitted to Congress, however, further careful study will be required. The proposed unified relief system should be closely tied in with the general reorganization of the local government, also to be sought this year.

And since this appeal for better co-ordination of relief activities is as applicable to other communities as to Washington, it should assist in a complete transformation of the WPA. While that is being accomplished the "consolidated intake" service proposed by Mr. Lewis would be a useful step in the right direction.

Whether it's "intervene" or "interfere" depends upon the relative sizes of the nations involved.

Nerves In London

From Pathfinder Magazine

In response to requests which besieged them during September's European crisis, London theaters have posted a backstage notice to tone down pistol shots on the stage. It says: "The nerves of an enormous number of people, especially women, have been reduced to a supersensitive condition by the constant reminder of air raids, and a loud report is now a physical strain which causes both pain and actual illness."

Traveler A-Hoof

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We now discover that in the modern system of traffic slaughter two automobile associations are for stricter pedestrian regulation and suppression. Perhaps this surprises you. Perhaps it doesn't.

To clear the record, I'm a car owner who likes to travel a-hoof at least 5 miles daily because that is the minimum the animal needs to keep in shape, but I'd prefer a bicycle if using one wasn't a short road to daisy pushing.

Now, the pedestrian doesn't contribute to the prosperity of the motor industry. For many years they rooked his real estate taxes for road upkeep. He took it without complaint, unlike his motoring counterpart who, despite his domination of American life, squawks because a portion of his tax is diverted to general purposes.

The pedestrian deserves scant consideration. He's dumb, else he'd mortgage his hut, short-ration family and self that he might bring within reach the inestimable joys of motor travel in mass formation on clogged highways, to orchestral accompaniment of frenzied horns blown by haywires. The "ped" gets too much natural exercise and wastes seconds daily—which he wouldn't know what to do with anyhow, just like the car driver—by not being a downtown parker, driving to and from work in a high-speed pedestrian plow.

Let us consider accidents. If in their rush to get nowhere immediately two cars merge, the car frame acts as a buffer to the human cargo. That is, unless one car at high speed rams prow on into the other broadside, in which case—would you believe it?—the victim's fate is likely to match that meted out to the pedestrian, whose only armor is his carcass, his helplessness and innocence. I'm simply pointing out to the auto associations a dilemma in which the bright driver shows to no better advantage than the dumb pedestrian in need of regulation. A cracked skull, scrambled brains, lost parts or extinction may accrue in either case.

The associations haven't explained how the "ped's" chief menace, the savage driver just in off the highways where mounting speed limits are advocated yearly, is to be handled and put where he belongs with a traffic force 60 per cent of adequate. But then, maybe the associations haven't heard about the savage driver, the youthful driver, the dumb driver or other scourges of the traffic scene. I. H. L.

What Is Naziism?

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson seems to have difficulty in defining naziism. In her "Record" of December 26 she says: "Naziism is a world-wide revolutionary movement, with a diabolically cunning and thorough scheme for undermining all the non-Nazi governments in the world. It attempts to do this directly, by revolutionary propaganda, and indirectly by measures for creating international social unrest, and by a trade policy designed to disintegrate world markets."

Just what is this "revolutionary propaganda"? What is this Nazi created "social unrest"? The Communists are the only ones who believe in creating international social unrest. Naziism, as I understand it, is at the opposite pole from communism. Only when Miss Thompson refers to "trade policies" is she definite. If barter trade is a sign of naziism then there are a lot of Nazis in the world. All through the Midwest and South in the U. S. farmers gather at the county seat on certain days of the month and trade horses, dogs, and all sorts of other things. Does this make them Nazis?

When two nations have little or no gold, and yet produce articles which may be exchanged to the mutual advantage of each other, do they become Nazis, or Nazi sympathizers by an exchange? This is certainly the simplest of all forms of trade. It was done long before money was thought of. It is the only fair way to trade work or the product of work when people have no common medium of exchange. If naziism means getting back to a simpler way of living, then it is "diabolically cunning," for it plays upon the inherent longing of men to break down the complexities of modern life.

Visitor Finds Washington Courtesy Unique

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While I like other big cities, I never had quite the courteous treatment in them that I find here in Washington. For instance, just let me mention three examples in my ten days' vacation here.

(1) I had promised my pupils to tell them of the lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree Christmas Eve in Lafayette Park, and had invited a friend here to go with me. I expected to furnish her with a seat by means of special passes supplied me in other years.

When we came to the entrance to the pavilions and seats the policemen refused admittance, saying that our passes must be yellow instead of blue. I turned away disappointedly, telling them I was from Maine and it meant much to me. Suddenly a distinguished looking man in army uniform came to me, saying, "Please accept these passes." I was so surprised and pleased that I could only say, "Thank you," which my friend also duplicated, and he was gone before I thought to inquire to whom we were indebted.

Our seats were opposite the President and I'm sure no one there appreciated the exercises more than my friend and I, and my pupils will enjoy them through me and the large folder of the exercises I'm taking to them.

(2) I went to the Freer Library to complete some research work begun last summer. The librarian in the department visited remembered me and introduced me to the head of the department, who assisted me so efficiently that I was able in a short time nearly to complete my work. I found that it was necessary to go to the library in the Smithsonian New Museum. When I reached there I found the former librarian had telephoned ahead and my book was all ready for me.

(3) The last courtesy I wish to mention is that a comparatively new friend, who is a young woman teacher in the Washington Cathedral Schoo' for Girls, telephoned my hotel asking me to occupy her lovely apartment for the remainder of my stay. As she was to be away the greater part of the time, I could be as free, she said, as at a hotel.

She came for me with her car and I was soon ensconced in a new environment with auto rides and many undreamed of privileges and pleasures.

Do you wonder that I consider Washington and its people unique?

On Preserving Landmarks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us hope that the gift to the Government of the Henry Kirke Porter mansion at 1600 I street may preserve at least one downtown landmark from the degradation that has overtaken so many that have been razed and their former sites occupied by unsightly parking lots, hot dog stands and the like.

The Post of December 26 contained a masterly article by Theodore Hall telling of the degeneration of the once beautiful and desirable residential city of Cleveland under the ruthless march of those present-day changes that are so mistakenly called "progress." They are in fact retrogression.

Destruction of valuable shade trees, haphazard zoning and inadequate building restrictions permitting dignified dwellings to be supplanted by cheap and tawdry commercial eyesores, the ubiquitous parking lot, increase of the smoke nuisance—these degradations are, alas, not unique with Cleveland, but are only too typical of nearly all American cities. We give less attention to civic planning than any civilized country in the world.

The Nation's Capital is no exception to this downward trend. In appearance Washington is rapidly sliding down hill. One beautiful avenue after another has degenerated. Upper Connecticut avenue has become a Coney Island. Massachusetts avenue is the latest to fall before the vandal's ax under the childishly futile idea that destroying more and more trees will "solve the traffic problem."

The Sixteenth and I streets corner would make an ideally suitable site for the much-needed downtown branch of the Public Library or a small art gallery or museum. If the present mansion could be remodeled for some cultural purpose and the present lovely gardens preserved, this entire section of the city would be enriched. Is it too much to hope that Miss Hegeman's generous gift will be devoted to one of these suitable purposes? Self-interest alone, if not sentiment, should prompt preservation of our all too few remaining beauty spots.

MRS. CHAS. EDWARD RUSSELL,

Sees Menace In Franco

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That fascism is showing its ugly face here in the United States recent pronouncements through the public press give abundant evidence. This is particularly true with regard to the Spanish nationalist Franco in the dastardly attempt to overthrow the duly elected republican government of Spain. If loyal Americans fail to face this menace manfully and with a determination to crush this deadly menace, the blame must rest at their door.

Congress should take immediate steps to raise the embargo on Spain and thereby carry out the wish of a vast majority of the American people, whose sympathy with our sister republic of Spain is both sincere and in the interest of the preservation of democracy, now being so viciously attacked by enemies, often under pious pretenses. Let us emulate the example of our forefathers. CHARLES E. BRUCE.

The Post Impressionist

Snake Charmer

IT IS AMAZING how many races have had some kind of snake-worship: the Indians with their thousand-headed serpent Adissechen; the Hindus with Ananta; the Egyptians with Apophis. The Greeks, who were just too refined, nevertheless had creatures with women's heads and snakes' bodies, who were the same thing as our well-known "vampires."

Whether the resemblance just happened or was the deliberate plan of the producers, the screen vampires were very much on the snake-vampire pattern. The style these days ran to actresses who had all the characteristics of the predacious snake-vampires (of course, I mean theatrically speaking, for personally they were very nice girls). These vampires were sinuous creatures in slinky satins and diamonds, who coiled around their male victims and shushed them with hissing noises, meantime preying on their pocketbooks for more satins and diamonds.

Later the producers gave them a more American slant, bringing out cuties with big round eyes and long curly lashes, known as "baby vamps," cute as could be, but up to all the tricks of their big sisters. This kind of thing went on with variations, until the type became shop-worn around the edges, and was shelved for something more up-to-date.

But one day a producer came along with a real idea, which involved an actress who was not merely a lady with snake-like parts to be played, but was a reptile leading lady; in fact, a saurian, or prehistoric monster beast known as the "dinosaur."

I am speaking about that unique production, "The Lost World," I think it was called. You may remember that the scene was part of the antediluvian world which, through some geological freak, had been kept intact upon a plateau, separated by a deep chasm from the outer world. The story went that when prehistoric monsters had long disappeared from other parts of the earth, they still continued to live in this last remnant of the ancient world.

Some scientists succeeded in crossing the chasm and spent an awful night in scenes which included a mixture of dinosauri, other prehisteric beasts, anthropoid apes, snakes, a forest fire, animals wildly fighting or running from the fire, and so on. There was a grand conclusion: one dinosaur was shipped alive to London, where she (I am sure it was a "she") tore down London Bridge, and went around the city sticking her reptilian head in houses, scaring poker players and other guilty souls into fits. I think the dinosaur finally disappeared down the Thames, bound for the great open spaces; but this was a long time ago, and memory may be at fault here. However, it was one grand yarn!

The scientific magazines gave it space because of the accuracy of the prehistoric animals, which were really little models made to appear their natural size through trick-photography.

Now, however, I come to the odd part of this narrative; which might well be called, "a study in retaliation." Even a worm sometimes gets to the cross-roads, and it was that way with the snakes.

At that time, there was a Mr. Mumble who operated a "Chamber of Horrors" across the street from the Byjo Theater which had been billing all the feature pictures, including the sinuous vampire ladies and the scaly dinosaur.

One of the creatures in the "Chamber" was a lady snake named "Evadne." For years she had been looking at these lurid theatrical posters. She may have rather liked some of them, but the dinosaur was evidently too strong for her. After all, Hollywood had been using the reptile theme for a long time. It was about time for the snakes to "go Hollywood." It is possible that Evadne's head was turned until she imagined herself in a star role.

Whatever may be the reason, one icy night Evadne evaded her keeper, and slithered out into the snowy street. That was where she made her first mistake.

Evadne was definitely not the type to be cast for a part in "The Old Homestead," or "Orphans of the Storm." Her second mistake was quite as fatal to ambition. Seeing a light and the prospect of heat in a nearby house, she stuck her head and several yards of neck in an open window, after the example of the prehistoric reptile in "Lost World."

But, unfortunately, the occupant was not playing poker, and therefore he did not have a guilty conscience to make him fear an apparition like Evadne. Instead he was a learned, studious herpetologist, and his idea of perfect bliss was to have some new variety of snake stick her head in his window, saving him an expensive, tiresome trip to the tropics. He popped Evadne into his snake bag, and after photographing, measuring and admiring, he returned Evadne to the "Chamber of Horrors." That is, in brief, the tale of Evadne and her attempt at stardom.

Her mistake is one which is common; she was in advance of her times!

Had she lived today, she might have been engaged for a part in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and become one of those helpful beasts who protect the heroine from all evil. I can even picture her shining coils in a magic circle around Snow White.

But maybe I am getting Teutonic mythology mixed up in this, and, after all, confusion has to stop somewhere! E. DALWICK.

The Real Task Facing Japan

By Barnet Nover

Difficulties Many

FOR JAPAN to get what she is after in China, it is not enough to win military victories. During the 15 months of the undeclared war there has been a long succession of these victories. But the war has not yet been won. Indeed, it is possible to imagine Japan winning every battle of this war and losing the war itself.

NOVER

The real task facing Japan is not military at all. In the first place, she must persuade the Chinese to accept Japan's military superiority as an accomplished fact and to "co-operate" with Japan in the exploitation of China's resources. In addition, the Tokyo government must secure the willing or unwilling consent of interested foreign powers to the establishment of the "new order" in eastern Asia and the destruction of the status quo resting on a great number of treaties the Japanese now deem obsolete.

SINCE THE FALL of Hankow, Japan has been straining every nerve to accomplish both of these ends as rapidly as possible. It was assumed in Tokyo that once Chiang Kai-shek's temporary capital had been taken and the principal route to the sea cut, the Chinese armies would disintegrate with defeatism becoming rampant.

The next step, as the Japanese saw it, was therefore to unite all the various puppet governments that had been established in Shanghai, Peiping, Tientsin, Nanking and so on in one pro-Japanese government headed by some Chinese figure capable of commanding the respect of the multitude.

For a time there was talk that Wu Pei-fu would come out of retirement to head such a regime with which a "peace" could be concluded and which would serve as the Chinese front for a Japanese-dominated regime. Apparently Wu balked and no other would-be puppet has come forward.

WITHIN the Nationalist government itself, however, there has, for some time, been a faction which favored making peace with Japan on the best terms possible. As long ago as last August it was rumored, for instance, that emissaries of Italy operating in Shanghai, Hong Kong and Hankow, had been seeking an understanding with Premier Wang Ching-wei, the reputed leader of the peace group. Commenting on these rumors on August 27, this column pointed out that, "despite official denials, they could not be dismissed out of hand." This week has seen confirmation of the reports. Wang Ching-wei has come out in the open as the head of a faction that is anxious to end the war at whatever cost.

Why do Wang Ching-wei and his group favor peace at this time? The reasons are partly personal, partly psychological and partly political. The war has been going on for 15 months and the destruction of life and property has been appalling. Some war-weariness is, under the circumstances, inevitable. As for Wang Ching-wei he has long been jealous of Chiang Kai-shek. Himself one of the oldest and one of the most intimate disciples of the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese republic, he has seen his position obscured by the generalissimo. Furthermore, while once very much to the left of Chiang, in his political orientation, he is now decidedly to the right.

For this reason he is suspicious of the close working relationship that exists between the Nationalist government and the Chinese Soviet forces of the northwest. He is also alarmed over the possibilities arising out of the fact that the principal outside aid which China is receiving in her struggle with Japan comes from Russia.

IT IS REPORTED that the Nationalist government, now stationed at Chungking in China's Far West, has deprived Wang Ching-wei and his followers of membership in the party. There is no indication that Chiang is prepared to accept the kind of peace which Japan is ready to offer. So far as he is concerned the war must go on.

In the meantime Japan has been doing all it can to secure the approval by foreign powers of the idea that the status quo, and the treaties which brought that status quo into being, are no longer in existence. A "new order" has been created in the Far East, Arita said, one making possible the wholehearted co-operation of China, Japan and Manchukuo and the western powers had better adjust themselves to this "new order."

BY DESIGN or coincidence, Arita's declaration was soon followed by the action of the United States in extending through the Export-Import Bank a $25,000,000 credit to China. This was an unmistakable indication that the United States would not meekly submit to Japan's action in closing the Open Door.

The credit move brought immediate results. What notes had failed to accomplish the financial weapon did. More than anything that has happened in sometime, it impressed upon Toyko this Nation's serious concern with her treaty-smashing course. No wonder, then, that in his statement of December 22 outlining Japan's conditions for peace, Premier Konoye was much more moderate, much more conciliatory than Foreign Minister Arita had been.

Denying that Japan has any intention of exercising an economic monopoly in China, Prince Konoye declared that the future basis of Sino-Japanese relations would be one of "neighborly amity." On China's part this would involve, among other things, recognition of the independence of Manchukuo, Chinese adherence to the anti-comintern pact; consent to the stationing of Japanese troops at specified points; the designation of inner Mongolia as a special anti-Communist area; freedom of residence and trade for Japanese in the interior of China; facilities for the development of China's natural resources, especially in North China and inner Mongolia.

THESE CONDITIONS Chiang Kai-shek is unlikely to accept. And the latest American note to Tokyo shows that the United States, while prepared to discuss with Japan and other interested powers any advisable changes in existing treaties has no intention of accepting the Japanese thesis regarding the existence of a "new order." The latest American protest is one for the record. Whatever Japan may do, the United States, the note says, "reserves all rights of the United States as they exist and does not give assent to any impairment of any of those rights."

It will be argued, of course, that this latest note will have as little effect as its predecessors in bringing Japan to book. That may be. But America's economic power is such that the Tokyo government could hardly afford to ignore our protests altogether. The struggles for the maintenance of American rights and interests in the Far East is no more over than is the undeclared war.

Supreme Court TVA Decision Possible Today

Justices May Rule on 'Yardstick' Program After 2-Week Recess

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court may rule today whether the TVA power program is constitutional.

This is one of 34 cases argued and awaiting decision. The court has been in recess for two weeks to permit the justices to prepare opinions.

The Tennessee Valley Authority program was challenged by 14 private utilities which contended that competition from Government-produced electricity threatened them with "irreparable injury if not destruction."

They appealed from a decision by a three-judge Federal court in Tennessee that the companies "have no immunity from lawful competition even if their business be curtailed or destroyed."

Other cases that may be decided today involve:

The question whether Kansas and Kentucky may ratify, after once rejecting, the proposed Constitutional amendment to abolish child labor.

Right of the National Labor Relations Board to withdraw its case against the Ford Motor Co. from the Federal Circuit Court at Covington, Ky. The board, which is trying to force the Ford Motor Co. to reinstate 29 employes, wanted to withdraw litigation to amend its procedure, but the company objected.

proposals which, in our opinion, are ill-advised, hastily conceived, or which otherwise threaten to be detrimental to the national welfare.

"The paramount objective is to restore the solid prosperity of the country—to put our 10,000,000 unemployed back to work. Permanent jobs at American wages are the only real index of recovery."

The new leader said "balanced constitutional government will be restored," adding that the increased Republican House membership would give the G. O. P. "a real voice in the formulation of policies and programs during the next two years."

Pope, Brown Action Today

In advance of his message, the President today may send the first of his nominations to the Senate. Two appointments expected to be announced today are that of Senator Pope, of Idaho, to the Tennessee Valley Authority, and Senator Brown, of New Hampshire, to the long-vacant Comptroller General's post.

As a matter of "senatorial courtesy," nominations of former colleagues usually are confirmed unanimously by the Senate without reference to committee. But Senate Minority Leader McNary said he will not observe this rule on appointments this year. Objections by McNary will send both appointments to committee for scrutiny. Pope was defeated in the primaries; Brown in the November election. There is little opposition to either appointment.

Nominations of Harry Hopkins to be Secretary of Commerce, and Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan to be Attorney General are not expected until later in the week. These also will be referred to committee.

Highlight development of the day will be submission to the Senate of the Sheppard Campaign Expenditures Committee report on alleged WPA political activities in the recent campaign. An effort subsequently will be made to refer this report of the Commerce Committee for consideration in connection with the Hopkins appointment.

Some clews to the President's opening message were supplied in Bankhead's radio speech. The Speaker, who has seen a rough draft of the message, said he assumes the President will discuss the international situation at some length together with measures "reasonably necessary for the strengthening of our armed national defense." He predicted the country will support subsequent action by Congress making adequate and yet reasonable provisions for our safety and security."

Bankhead said the President probably will devote part of his message to the transportation problem in general, and the plight of the railways in particular.

Losses Good for Party

Taking note of election reverses, the Speaker in his broadcast last night said "it may be better for my party to have had its majority reduced" from the standpoint of militant party spirit and program. He declared that in his opinion "Democrats cannot afford to overlook the result of the last election."

He said he thought it "the part of political expediency, as well as of public service, to undertake to analyze, as far as we may, the causes of the increased vote by the opposition party" to determine whether the "results were obtained solely by either bad features of the laws that we have passed or by the unwise administration of those laws, and not by local conditions entirely aside from Federal activities, which had a profound reaction in some States."

If the analysis shows Republican gains resulted from enactment of some laws, or administration of those laws, Bankhead said steps should be taken "to meet public opinion in the modification and correction of such criticisms as may have been influential in the recent election."

The Speaker thought it "quite possible" there will be a sharp controversy in Congress not only over the amount of deficiency relief appropriations, but over proposed limitations on present relief spending methods.

Bankhead also forecast:

Serious efforts by some groups to amend or modify the Wagner labor relations act.

A "vigorously contested" controversy over other proposals to modify essential features of the farm act.

A "very spirited and possibly acrimonious discussion" of a wide variety of proposed changes in the social security act, with old age pensions the chief bone of contention.

Passage of a "fairly conceived and properly administered reorganization bill," to bring added Government efficiency and savings.

Pertinent Facts

By Mark Sullivan

THE FACTS here given about Gov. Murphy of Michigan, now appointed to be Attorney General of the United States, are taken in part from official records, in some part from newspaper accounts at the time of the happenings. I think the facts can be relied upon as accurate.

In January, 1937, workers in a plant of the General Motors Co. at Flint, Mich., engaged in a sit-down strike. The company went into court and asked for a writ of ejectment. The court held a hearing, with both the company and the strikers represented by counsel. The court issued a writ of ejectment. The sheriff read the writ to the strikers. The strikers "booed" the sheriff. In the same spirit they, according to a newspaper account, sent a telegram to Gov. Murphy saying, "We have decided to stay in the plant."

When the court's writ was disobeyed, the court issued what is called a "writ of body attachment." Under this writ it was the duty of the sheriff to arrest the sit-downers and remove them. Obviously the sheriff could not alone arrest and remove several hundred men. The sheriff asked Gov. Murphy for the help of the National Guard. Gov. Murphy did not order the National Guard to help. Instead, according to testimony given later by the judge, the sheriff reported to the court that "the Governor does not want me to execute the order of the court."

GOV. MURPHY, after telling the sheriff to withhold enforcement of the writ, called a meeting of heads of the company owning the factory and of the union conducting the sit-down. After about a week of conference, the company agreed to negotiate the matters at issue between it and the union. Thereupon, and not till then, the sit-downers evacuated the plant, voluntarily, cheering as they marched out. The sit-downers won the sit-down and won it through Gov. Murphy's unwillingness to give help to the sheriff to enforce the writ of the court.

In this situation, two charges were made against Gov. Murphy. One was that by his action he encouraged the sit-down strike as a strategy of labor disputes. This charge is hardly disputable—although Gov. Murphy's friends say that in words he has never encouraged or condoned the sit-down. But the Flint sit-down was the first important use of this device in America. The success of it led to an epidemic of sit-downs in Michigan and throughout the country.

THE SECOND CHARGE against Gov. Murphy was that, when officially called upon as commander of the National Guard, he failed to give help for enforcement of a writ of a court. This charge is correct. The writ of the court was never executed. The break-down of law enforcement was plain. The Flint breakdown, standing alone, was brief. Taken in connection with the other sit-downs which it encouraged, the break-down was serious. The man responsible for the break-down in law enforcement is now appointed to be the chief law-enforcement official of the country, Attorney General of the United States.

In the talk that has arisen since President Roosevelt appointed Gov. Murphy, there have been statements or implications that Gov. Murphy acted in consultation with President Roosevelt. There are implications that President Roosevelt was as responsible, perhaps more responsible, than Gov. Murphy.

For the imputation against President Roosevelt there is some evidence. On the day that Gov. Murphy failed to give help to enforce the court's writ, and called a conference between company and strikers, he announced he was calling the conference "in accordance with the wish of the President of the United States."

NEARLY TWO YEARS later, when Gov. Murphy was under criticism before the Dies committee, President Roosevelt came to his rescue. In a published statement, President Roosevelt said that throughout the conference conducted between the company and the sit-downers under Gov. Murphy's direction, and hence throughout the period of suspension of the writ of the court, I received almost daily reports on the situation from the Governor.'

In this connection there is a remarkable coincidence. The day Gov. Murphy told the sheriff not to execute the writ of the court, and in consultation with President Roosevelt began his conference between the strikers and the company—that day was February 5, 1937. This was the same day on which President Roosevelt sent to Congress his bill giving him the power to appoint six additional Justices of the Supreme Court, and to reorganize the lower courts. The coincidence may lead to inferences that Mr. Roosevelt was in a mood of irritation against courts generally, possibly of wish to reduce their authority and their prestige.

IT SHOULD BE ADDED that it seems clearly the policy of one agency set up by the Administration, the National Labor Relations Board, to justify the sit-down strike as an incident of labor disputes in some circumstances. In two cases, Fansteel and Douglas Aircraft, sit-downers occupied a plant illegally. In both cases the sit-downers were eventually arrested, and some of them tried, convicted and sentenced to fine or imprisonment. In both cases the Labor Board ordered the companies to reinstate the sit-downers in their employment without loss of priority rights, or other detriment.

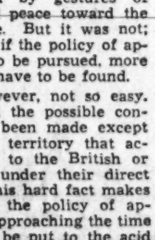
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Prospect Of Appeasement In Europe

ANY PREDICTION about the prospects of a general European war depends upon an estimate of what can still be done with the Chamberlain policy of appeasement. It is, we must remember, a policy based on the major premise that a general war would be the worst of all possible evils, because it would destroy the flower of the youth of Europe, would devestate the great cities, and would unleash all over the continent a revolutionary barbarism. The minor premise of the policy is that Germany and Italy are ready and willing to condemn Europe to the worst of all possible evils, a general war, provided that their grievances are not redressed and their claims are not satisfied. The problem of appeasement, therefore, is to find concessions which Hitler and Mussolini can get without having to fight for them.



LIPPMANN

Last summer the policy very nearly failed. For it looked for a while as if the Czechs would resist and that France would fulfill her treaty and that Britain would have to fulfill her obligations to France. But though the odds were unfavorable, in the end Mr. Chamberlain scored a diplomatic triumph for the policy of appeasement. He succeeded in inducing the Czechs to submit, and this relieved France of her treaty obligation; and then after almost superhuman labors, he persuaded Hitler to accept the concession without fighting for it.

THE AFTERMATH of Munich has, however, been somewhat disappointing to Mr. Chamberlain and to those who think as he does. For the theory of the Munich pact was that in conceding the mastery of eastern Europe to him, Hitler would and ought to be appeased. The policy which triumphed at Munich should have been followed by gestures of friendship and peace toward the British Empire. But it was not; and therefore, if the policy of appeasement is to be pursued, more appeasements have to be found.

That is, however, not so easy. For almost all the possible concessions have been made except concessions in territory that actually belongs to the British or French or is under their direct protection. This hard fact makes it likely that the policy of appeasement is approaching the time when it is to be put to the acid test. That test can be postponed only as long as concessions can be found that the dictators want and that can be given to them without actually hauling down the British or the French flag in some place where either nation is now sovereign. Mr. Chamberlain will probably feel that his visit to Rome has been another step forward if he can find concessions of that sort which Mussolini will accept.

IF WE ASK ourselves why it is so difficult to make the policy of appeasement work, we shall find, I think, that it works badly because it is based on a radical misunderstanding of the European problem. The policy of appeasement was not conceived by Mr. Chamberlain and his conservative supporters in England and France. It was conceived by the liberal critics of the Treaty of Versailles who spent years pleading with the ruling powers in London and Paris that there could be no peace in Europe until the obvious grievances of the German people were redressed and their legitimate aspirations satisfied. A policy of appeasement is, let us realize, the policy of the strong towards the weak; it is the policy of the magnanimous victor seeking reconciliation with the vanquished.

But when the position is reversed, when the vanquished is strong enough to intimidate the former victor, then a policy of appeasement is nothing but a proof of weakness, leading to ever more unappeasable demands. Mr. Chamberlain's trouble is that he has become a pacifist liberal several years too late.

HE FINDS himself in a situation where the men he is dealing with are accustomed to dictating their demands and not to accepting concessions to placate them. His is the mentality of a civilian businessman who thinks in terms of tangible things; theirs is the mentality of military strategists who think in terms of the power to dispose of things. Thus, to Mr. Chamberlain's supporters Hitler ought to be satisfied with tangible things, with Czecho-Slovakia and Austria, and perhaps the Russian Ukraine and some colonies in Africa. They would like to make peace on a business basis by a transfer of real estate.

But peace is not to be had that way. For Hitler is not a businessman interested in accumulating real estate; Hitler is a revolutionary empire builder who sees within his reach the attainment of the sovereign power to dispose of all the real estate there is. This is the difficulty with Mr. Chamberlain's policy—that he is hoping to satisfy a man who loves power by conceding to him mere material things.

These two ways of looking at the world, in terms of things and in terms of power, are so different that there is never any true meeting of minds. It is as if Mr. Chamberlain were trying to appease his most formidable rival for the post of prime minister by offering him a peerage for his vanity and a fine country house to keep him quiet. The thing would not work. For if the rival were formidable he could not be appeased by the title and the real estate, and if he were the kind of man who could be appeased by them he would be so negligible that it would not be necessary to buy him off.

NEVERTHELESS it is possible that appeasement can still be made to work for some time to come. There will be no need to run the risk of war if Mr. Chamberlain can continue to concede not things, not real estate, but power—that is to say, strategically important points which render Hitler and Mussolini stronger, Britain and France weaker. It is true that nobody wants a war, and if Britain and France will abdicate gradually but steadily their position in Europe and the world, that should by all reasonable calculations, provide sufficient appeasement to avert the catastrophe of a general war.

But at some point in the retreat, when their powers of resistance have become still more impaired, the British and French people may realize that they are not giving away things, but their sovereignty and perhaps their very independence. If they should then decide that they will yield no more the situation will become even more critical than it was in September. For at that point Mr. Chamberlain would have no concessions he could make in order to continue the policy of peace by appeasement.

Dr. Roosevelt Examines The Patient Again

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, Sam, how do you feel now?

Uncle Sam—I feel I ought to feel that I feel better. But it may just be due to the fact you're letting me alone lately.

Dr. Roosevelt — You never looked better since I took your case. There's a new expression on your countenance.

Sam—The old look of apprehension and fright is gone.

Dr. Roosevelt—I always knew something would happen to drive that scared look away.

Sam—So did I, but I wasn't sure it would be the last election.

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't tell me that election made you feel better.

Sam—Better than all those pills, elixirs and emulsions. This is the first time I'd had any encouragement in my belief that the internes would ultimately stop experimenting on me.

Dr. Roosevelt—I don't think you ever gave my treatments a fair trial.

Sam—Fair trial! It wasn't even optional. I was surrounded, intimidated and outnumbered at every consultation.

Dr. Roosevelt—It was all for your own good.

Sam—No treatments that after six years have left me in the shape I'm in today can be called highly beneficial.

Dr. Roosevelt — Nonsense! You've been doing better than you admit. Where would you be today if I hadn't ordered drastic treatment?

Sam—I dunno, but I can't help feeling that, wherever I might be, I wouldn't have my present headache.

Dr. Roosevelt—I tried everything I could think of to get you back on your feet for the last six years.

Sam—That's the trouble!

Dr. Roosevelt—You're practically a well man now; why don't you admit it?

Sam—I'm afraid to open my mouth for fear somebody will shove another box of pills into it.

Dr. Roosevelt—On the level, why don't you get out of that bed and act like your old self?

Sam—Every time I've tried that your medical staff has knocked me right back into bed. Lissen, doc, is there anything in the rumor you are going to modify your treatments?

Dr. Roosevelt — You've been reading the Republican newspapers again.

Sam—No; I got it from some of the Democratic ones.

Dr. Roosevelt—I'm not certain about future treatments. I'll know more about that after the first of the year, when I see how Congress takes to my new prescriptions.

Sam—If you can give nature a break it will be a great favor.

Dr. Roosevelt—I may have to. Well, good-by, Sam, and take care of yourself.

Sam—How I wish you'd let me!

Your Figure

10 Pounds Easily Lost By Diet

21-Day Regime Given All Necessary Food Properties Included; Excess Calories Out

By special request Miss Kain's 21-day reducing diet is being reprinted. Please clip and save menus at end of this column.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU can hardly wait to take off 10 pounds, let's get going!

Taking off excess weight is simply a matter of taking fewer calories every day than you need, and you can work it out so accurately that you can subtract 2 pounds a week . . . just like that!

Unless you go out of your way to exercise, you use about 15 calories per pound—you might lose 16. If your weight were normal, that number of pounds multiplied by 15 would be the calories you could use daily and keep your weight perfect.

But you want to lose 10 pounds or 20, and to do this you must use less than your normal calorie requirement. By limiting yourself to two-thirds the normal calorie requirement, you will reduce at the rate of approximately 2 pounds per week.

Estimate Normal Weight

The excess weight you are so anxious to lose doesn't figure at all in these calculations. It is simply excess baggage and while you have to carry it around, it doesn't use enough calories to makes any difference. You must do all your figuring on the basis of normal weight, and if you don't know what that is, there is an easy way to estimate it.

For the first five feet of your height allow 100 pounds if you have a slight frame, 105 pounds for a medium frame, or 110 pounds for a stocky build. Then to this number add 5½ pounds for each inch by which your height exceeds 5 feet. The result is the number you multiply by 15, and two-thirds of that gives you the calories on which you will reduce.

No Diet at All

For the average woman the 1,200 calorie menus are perfect. The calories are low enough to assure a steady loss in weight, and all the protective foods are included. In fact, it isn't a diet at all . . . it's a plan by which you eat what you actually need, leaving off the things you do not need.

21-DAY REDUCING DIET
SECOND DAY
(To Lose 10 Pounds)

To assure an optimum vitamin intake on these low calorie menus supplement the daily diet with one concentrate A, B, D and C vitamin capsule. These vitamins will increase your feeling of being well. No slimming program is complete without specific exercise. When on a low calorie diet it is particularly important to take abdominal exercises, since the decrease in food may cause constipation. Do not omit the milk or any other protective food from these menus. Restrict your total mealtime liquids to 8 ounces—which is one glass. If soup or beverage is taken, drink only one-half glass of water. Use salt sparingly. Barring water retention your weight should be down 3½ pounds by the beginning of the eighth day.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 2.

I SUPPOSE that for the last ten days the womanhood of America has just been dragging about its daily tasks, its head nodding in shame. For we were cruelly knocked out of the top spot in this "ten best - dressed women" list cooked up annually by the snooty dressmakers of Paris—and it just makes us wonder why the boys bothered to fight that revolution in 1776.

ALICE HUGHES

Some unknown dark horse named Mme. Antenor Patino, described as a "tin plate" princess of Spain, grabbed the crown of love and beauty. The best that glorious expatriate, the Duchess of Wally Windsor, could do was nab second money. Fourth came the Baroness de Rothschild, formerly Kitty Wolff, of Philadelphia; sixth arrived the great Mrs. Harrison Williams, and in eighth place was Mrs. Gilbert Miller, who was Kitty Bache before she married the famed play producer. In the tenth spot was one of the Spreckles girls, of California.

Add them all up, and our girls still did pretty well, even though we lost the lead. It seems that these chunky rolls of vulgar American dollars still speak pretty loudly in that dear Paris, where everything is done in the name of art. But, my little heart is all pieces over the dismal finish of Mona Williams, way down in sixth, and far out of the money. Of course, she has been burying herself in her beloved Capri villa of late, and sort of neglecting the duds, but it's a sad fate for us who thought her sartorial position impregnable. Well, this will teach us a good lesson. And while our girls slept on the job, this Mme. Antenor, whoever she is, sneaked past the wire on the rail. Tin—Spain—Antenor—what are these things?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There are rumors hereabouts that Beatrice Lillie, the British comedian who is Lady Peel, keeps insisting that she is not married to Edward Duryea Dowling, a handsome young man of the Broadway theatre. But all we folks know is that they are seen constantly together whenever Auntie Bea is in town. Which she is at present, getting ready to star in Noel Coward's new revue, which will be all gay songs, and very few comedy skits, I hear. But Null's enormous public will welcome whatever he pushes its way.

It is reported that Moanin' Low Libby Holman curtseyed to Kirsten Flagstead in a restaurant the other day and called her "the greatest woman in the world." Very pretty work by the Cincinnati girl, I'd say. Didn't even say "the world's greatest Wagnerian soprano." Whole hawg or none for this Libby . . .

Every now and then a big hawk invades the skyscrapers around Wall Street—and everyone stops work. The other day the office workers down there saw a big brown hawk capture a local mooching pigeon. After its meal, the big bird flew over toward Brooklyn, probably looking for another mooching pigeon . . .

Marion Cooley, the society hostess on a semipro basis, who bosses big parties at the Hotel Pierre once a week, threw a big surprise shindy the other Sunday night. And what do you think the uptown guests did to amuse themselves? Why, they pelted each other with cotton snowballs. Probably quite a few fainted dead away at the daring originality of the whole thing.

Ann Keis, a local beauty, is said to have captured the heart of Manuel Trucco, son of the Chilean Ambassador to Washington. Just another Pan-American Union.

The Club Paper

You can't put it off a minute longer. You will sit right down and collect your thoughts . . . and write something. Why on earth you ever agreed to be on a club program—oh, well, it's too late to worry now. You might as well get it out of the way. There's no use stalling any longer.

First, though, you'd better get a drink . . . wait, did you wash your teeth? . . . Oh, yes, you did . . . Well, maybe you'd better wash your hands again . . . so they won't get the paper soiled.

You settle yourself at your desk, suddenly notice that the curtain needs straightening. It would drive you mad to try to write looking at that . . . At the window you survey the landscape outside, wistfully. It looks as though there might be snow in the air . . . what did the paper say, anyway, about the weather? . . . Well, you might as well look it up and get that off your mind.

Back at your desk, you tinker with your fountain pen. It feels as if the ink might be getting low. Well, you'll fill it to be on the safe side . . . And your pencil needs a sharper point. As you sharpen it, you notice that you have a little hangnail . . . Now, you've certainly got to stop and do something about that. It would drive you mad.

Now you are all ready—no, wait! Is that dust on the piano legs? . . . It is! You can't leave that. Somebody might come in. You wipe off the dust, survey the room with a hopeful eye. Nothing more seems amiss. You sit down at your desk, start assembling your notes. Have you got enough material? . . . Say, maybe you'd better run over to the library and do a little more reading . . . and put off the actual writing till tomorrow—no, there you are stalling again.

You turn resolutely toward your desk . . . someway you feel a little sick. Something hasn't agreed with you. Well, you'll take a little bicarb of soda and then really get down to work.

Again at your desk, you start sorting your notes . . . remember you have some more data in your bag. You get your bag, open it, root around for your other notes. Say, you really ought to stop and clean out your bag. It is a disgrace to be carrying one around that—no, you really must not. But you will stop long enough to count your money . . .

You are just starting to look through your notes again when the telephone rings. Thank heaven! . . . Your heart quickens. You sit up expectantly . . . Surely it is for you! . . . No, it is just somebody with the wrong number.

You look around the room like a drowning man in search of a straw. There is nothing wrong. There is nothing more to do . . . Resignedly you pick up your pencil.

For a Bride's Kitchen

For the new home-maker, a kitchen clock will be a valued and useful aid. Select one with large dial and legible numerals. It should be hung within plain view of the stove. With a little training the new cook will learn to watch the clock carefully; that's essential in cooking.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Newly Married Man Bluntly Denies Financial Help to Bride's Dependent Parents; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bride of six months. My husband has a nice position that pays a good salary. We live in an apartment that we are furnishing gradually. We were not so fortunate as to have any furniture given to us. In other words, we had to provide our own start. We live about 250 miles from our home town, where both our families reside. I have two sisters—one married, one single—living at home, both working.

My married sister hasn't taken a place of her own because her husband's earnings haven't warranted it. Hence, she has worked and lived with the family during the five years of her marriage. When I was home on a visit at Christmas, she told us that she and her husband were planning to move to themselves as soon as arrangements could be made to take care of the folks, since the unmarried sister doesn't earn enough to assume full responsibility.

I asked if her husband was now ready to assume responsibility for her support, and she replied that they could have a place of their own on the amount they regularly contribute to the family. My father isn't well and doesn't earn enough to support either himself or mother. Now that my sister wants a home of her own, she says I should carry my share of the responsibility and asked what I suggested doing.

I talked it over with my husband. He said he wasn't in a position to help them and that he didn't intend to support them and have them dependent upon him; that he had married me and wanted to work for me and give me all the comforts he could. He thinks I did my share when I was living at home and contributing—since I contributed more at that time than my married sister did. He refuses to help them; doesn't like them and says the matter is closed.

When I asked my married sister what her husband suggested, she replied that he said it was up to us to decide. Inasmuch as his earnings don't amount to much, and his wife is working, I suppose he felt it was not his place to suggest. My sister thinks she and I should contribute something each week to the support of our parents, but my husband won't hear if it. I don't know what to do. Can you help me? I shall be going home again on January 4 and should like to know what to say to my sister at that time. I shall be looking forward to your reply in The Post.

B. T.

The Partnership Attitude

DEAR B. T.: since you are (apparently) young, able-bodied, childless and capable of commanding some sort of personal income through your own efforts, why not accede without argument to your husband's selfish decision to reserve his earnings for his own comfort and social aggrandizement (which, actually, is what his attitude amounts to), and find employment for yourself that will provide the necessary wherewithal to aid your parents.

While your husband's intentions toward you personally may be of the very best, there is no denying the fact that his social outlook is pretty limited. Granted that he did not, as the saying goes, marry your family, nevertheless, in marrying you, he became the sharer of your sorrows and responsibilities (as well as the sharer of your joys), just as you did of his, and he is revealing a rather mean spirit in refusing to share the immediate "worse," on the ground that his in-laws' tribulations are no concern of his.

All that rightfully and inescapably concerns you—of an emotional, moral or social sort—likewise should, and basically does, concern him, whether or not he chooses to recognize and deal with that fact. His destiny is one with yours, so long as the marriage continues, and whatever problem confronts either of you properly invites a joint, and mutually considerate, solution. Just now, he is taking the attitude that because he is the bacon-winner, it is his prerogative to make arbitrary, autocratic decisions for the partnership; decisions reflecting his preferences and his feelings alone, and decisions to which he expects you to subscribe because HE says so.

Because such an attitude does violence to the spirit of the marriage contract, it is bound, sooner or later, to damage—and perhaps eventually to destroy—the outward and visible structure of the relationship. It is absurd of your husband to argue that he cannot and will not contribute to your parents' support for the reason that he wants to "give (you) all the comforts." What greater comfort could he give you, indeed, than a literal demonstration of his willingness to make your problems his problems, and to work shoulder to shoulder with you toward their honorable solution? And what material largesse could he ever bestow upon you that would make amends for his having robbed you of a good conscience and peace of mind? When he speaks of your "comfort" he is thinking of his own—so don't be deceived by his specious arguments, that are merely a cloak for personal selfishness.

Now, to return to the immediate problem of your parents' support. It is customary, and perhaps logical, for married children who live at home, to assume the lion's share of responsibility for needy parents. They derive first-hand benefits of creature comfort from their investment, and, moreover, have no other dependents at the moment. But married offspring who are in any sort of financial position to do so have an obligation in conscience to contribute also to their parents' support and to lighten the load on the home-staying burden-bearer to the full extent of their respective means.

As has been pointed out time and again by census-takers in the field of married women workers outside the home, the majority of today's working wives are working from necessity—either for the purpose of providing indigent or semi-dependent relatives with the necessities of life, or for the purpose of guaranteeing greater economic security or more educational opportunities for beloved members of their immediate family circles. Therefore, if your husband obstinately refuses to contribute to your parents' support out of his moderate means (you say he receives "a good salary"), it is your modern-day social prerogative (custom-established) to make up the deficit by your own efforts. And this I would tell him, and also your sisters, on your imminent visit back home. As I see it, this is the only attitude and action you can take under the circumstances, providing you are not content to be—and do not wish to become—as callously inconsiderate as your husband seems to be.

Gay Nineties Live Again in New Bathing Suits

New York (AP).—The most sissified swim suits seen in years are going South this winter.

They are made of taffeta, moire, elasticized satin and gaily-flowered cottons, ruffled, tucked, fitted at the waist and flared in the skirt until they look more like a little girl's party frock or an abbreviated evening gown than a bathing suit.

Many of them hark back to the nineties in the ultra-femininity of their design. But a Rip Van Winkle who knew the nineties would get a jolt if he saw them. For, modest though they are in comparison to the strip tease suits of other years, they still expose far more epidermis than those that made their demure debut on the beaches 40 years ago.

Wife's Plea of 'Wear Overshoes' Called Sound, Anti-Cold Advice

Wet Chilling Lowers Body Resistance
Nose Membranes Are Easily Affected
Exposur Reeduces White Blood Cells

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE VERY word "cold" indicates that some relationship has been thought to exist between chilling of the body surfaces and the common winter respiratory infection. "Catching cold," an equally venerable phrase, simply emphasizes the idea.

Yet scientific experimenters in medicine have been very loath to accept this folklore explanation. Paul de Kruif wrote that while he was experimenting on the common cold at the Rockefeller Institute he shut himself naked in an icebox for an hour day after day and never caught cold.

John Muir related how, soaked to the skin, he slept on Alaskan glaciers over and over again. Arising in the morning, he wrung out his clothes and kept on expdoring. He rarely caught cold.

Yet the tradition is so strong and the seasonal incidence of colds in winter time so suggestive that one would like to find a relationship. The presence of the virus of the cold is certainly necessary. Given the presence of the virus and the chilling of the body surfaces, would, then, the chilling predispose to catching the cold? There was, presumably, no virus in Dr. De Kruif's icebox nor in Alaska. Experiments on monkeys indicate that when the two are combined, chilling is a factor.

Bodily Changes

Definite body changes do occur from chilling the body surface. These are described by Drs. Taylor and Dyrenforth, of Jacksonville, Fla.

They point out that cold water reduces bodily temperature much more rapidly than cold air, so that getting wet, as well as cold, is a factor.

Loss of bodily heat has a definite effect on the mucous membrane of the nose. There is a reduction of temperature inside the nose, as much as 10 degrees, and there is also blanching and loss of blood supply.

There is also a reduction of the white blood cells, due to exposure to cold. These are the cells which are supposed to combat all infections, including the common cold.

Exercise while exposed to cold is not followed by the reduction in white cells caused by cold alone. To prove this, observations made on marathon swimmers in cold water showed that the white cells were higher after the race than before. While observations made on three people who simply immersed themselves in a pool without swimming showed a distinct lowering of the white cells.

Lowers Resistance

This plainly indicates that chilling of the body surface, and especially wet chilling, lowers resistance so that invasion of cold virus is facilitated. The old wives' cry, "Have you got on your coat and your overshoes?" is good modern science.

Drafts and cold are particularly likely to induce acute attacks when chronic sinus infection and bronchial infection are present.

Debutantes Here Called Equals, If Not Superiors of British Models

English Writer's Unfavorable Reaction To Local Buds Incites Pointed Comment On Iowa Tractors and Indian Chiefs

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

DEFENSE OF DEBUTANTES: George Bernard Shaw's theory that Americans thrive on insults from Britishers has taken root and been cultivated all over the place. But it's high time somebody did something to vary the monotonous fruition.

Latest John Buller to deal us a sharp blow is Charles Graves, London Daily Mails' columnist. His latest article weighs our crop of debutantes with a heavy hand and finds them lacking in a lot of admirable qualities he attributes to girls of his own country.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"Yes, the American deb is obviously out to please, unlike the English deb," says Mr. Graves, basing his observations on the recent White House ball for Miss Eleanor Roosevelt. In turn we might ask, if your debs aren't out to please, why are they out at all? In other words, why have debuts? And what's wrong, anyway, with being "out to please?"

Truth is, the British debbie is just as eager to impress, to curry favor, to be popular as is any American bud. She isn't always obvious about it because she doesn't know how to be. In nine cases out of ten, she's lean, lanky, with less style than an Iowa tractor and as little charm as Chief Rain-in-the-Face. She has dignity, yes, a kind of dignity stemming from the traditional English feeling of superiority, untempered by either sympathy or sophistication.

Mr. Graves finds our debutantes often have poor complexions and their clothes are dowdy "by comparison"—with girls of Mayfair, of course. He is equally unflattering about the cut of clothes worn by our young men, implying they need nothing so much as some expert attention from Bond street. He mentions as the prettiest girl at the White House ball a Miss Selina Harmon, of Boston—incidentally, not only misspelling her name but fabricating her entire statement—and then flashes on to some other subject, after averring "at least, however the young men seemed very pleased with the girls, showing no sign of boredom." There's a lot wrong with that statement, besides its structure. The subtle (not so subtle at that) implication is a dainty bit of booting that probably will be smooth reading for many a smug subscriber to the London Daily Mail.

Britishers Not Noted for Chic

Now I can't speak for all the young ladies with whom Mr. Graves danced. But I do know the Washington debs who attended that party need ask no odds from the typical Mayfair Miss in any market. Of our entire Capital debutante crop—54 girls to be exact—there are only two whose complexions aren't as fresh and blooming as any English girl's Mr. Graves might mention. As to clothes—well British ladies, young and otherwise, are rarely noted either for style or impecable grooming. I've seen few girls in London who could hold a candle to the smart Washington debs in this year's lot.

Not that our fair blossoms are perfect. Goodness, no. Some are spoiled; some are snobbish and overly impressed with their importance; and one or two, so I've heard, occasionally display tendencies to rudeness. But Mr. Graves dilated on none of these foibles, and his comparison is odious from beginning to end. Furthermore, it's unfair; it's ill-timed, and it's plain bad manners.

According to the British, the American press is "terrific." But I can't think of a single American journalist who would go to London, attend a ball at Buckingham Palace and then write a piece lambasting the British in every line. When the slap slants in our direction, however, we're supposed to take it without a murmur and call it clever.

That's what we've done every since Charles Dickens penned his "Martin Chuzzlewit." And we'll have to listen and like it a lot longer. As long, in fact, as our more spineless citizens continue to be pleased each time a Britisher hurls an insult in our direction, invariably adding, "but you, of course, are different; not at all like an American."

Justice McReynolds Gives Egg-Nog Party

To a more agreeable subject: Justice James R. McReynolds' Sunday morning breakfasts and small dinners have made many a pleasant chapter in Washington social history, but yesterday afternoon he was host at a larger gathering that turned out to be one of the best parties of the season.

His handsomely furnished apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street was filled for well over two hours with friends who thronged in early and stayed late. The Justice received informally in his drawing room, personally escorting most of his callers on into the dining room. There a table, laden with dainties, featured creamy eggnog made from what must surely be the world's best recipe. Mrs. Elliott Billings, the former Priscilla Robb, officiated at the coffee urn, while Mrs. Winston Hobbs served the eggnog. Mingling with the guests and guiding them on to the smaller table in one corner where punch was poured was Mrs. Crete Hutchinson, wearing a simply cut frock of black velvet.

Glimpsed among the guests were many noted figures in Washington's official and residential circles. Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler were there, she in a smart black ensemble; also, former Justice Willis Vandevanter, the chief of naval operations, Admiral William Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy; the commandant of the navy yard, Rear Admiral George Pettingill, and Mrs. Pettingill; Frederic D. Delano, Dr. William Jennings Price, who seemed to know everyone there; Mrs. Price was among those missing, having been laid low with a cold.

Still others in the crowd were the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close; Dr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Compton, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Dr. and Mrs. Matthew White Perry, Mrs. Francis Savage, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mr. and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, of the Netherlands Legation, and many others.

Final 'Sister Act' Presented to Society

Bachrach.

The Misses Claire and Margaret Cotter, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter, who were presented to Capital society at a tea dance yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. The event rounded out this winter's long list of functions centered around debutantes. The Misses Cotter are the third and last "sister act" to blossom into society this season

Misses Cotter Bow to Society At Tea Dance

Party for Sisters Climaxes Holiday Debutante Functions

The last in the season's lengthy parade of Capital coming-out parties took place yesterday afternoon when the Misses Margaret and Claire Cotter bowed at a tea dance given by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter. Their party climaxed a whirlwind of debutante functions which have made the holidays the gayest two weeks of the winter.

The two girls were gowned alike yesterday in eggshell silk frocks made with hoopskirts and shirred bodices. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of Johanna Hill roses. Mrs. Cotter wore a long black velvet dress with a corsage of orchids.

Sidney's Orchestra Plays for Dancing

The trio received at the entrance to the Mayflower ballroom before a screen made of the many bouquets sent the debutantes. Sidney's orchestra played for dancing, and of the several hundred people invited, many lingered until long after 7 o'clock.

Miss Betty Couzens, daughter of Mrs. James Couzens, of Detroit, and the late Senator Couzens, is visiting the Misses Cotter and assisted at their debut. Her sister, Mrs. Couzens Chewning, whose engagement to Arthur Bryant, of Alexandria, is rumored, was also at the party.

Besides Miss Couzens, young friends of the debutantes who assisted were the Misses Nancy Hoskinson, Kay Joerissen, Peggy Tinker, Catherine Tilghman, Julie Cahill, Elizabeth Langlais, Betty Fischer, Lalla Harrison and Madeleine and Dorothy Cotter older sisters of the debs.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mrs. John W. Guider, who gave an eggnog party for the Misses Cotter earlier in the season; Mrs. Nelson Hartson, who gave a luncheon for them; Mrs. Daniel Cosley, Mrs. Duke Patrick, Mrs. Edward Wilkins, Mrs. Albert Warner, who gave a dinner for the debs; Mrs. George Romney, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who feted the Misses Cotter at luncheon; Mrs. Arthur Phelan, Mrs. Joseph Mundell and Mrs. James A. Cahill.

Dinner Dance Follows Debut

Miss Margaret Cotter, elder of the debutantes, is an accomplished horsewoman, and on her favorite mount, Rocksie, has won many trophies. She attended Gunston Hall and her sister was a student at Manhattanville College prior to "coming out."

Following the debut party, Mr. and Mrs. Cotter gave a dinner dance at the Mayflower for the debs. They will be feted again on January 9 when Miss Mary Catherine Mundell will give a luncheon for them at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Worthington Fetes Daughter at Dinner

Mrs. Ralph Worthington entertained at dinner last evening, in compliment to her daughter, Mrs. Adam K. Luke, of New York.

The party took place at the Shoreham Hotel, where Mrs. Worthington recently took an apartment for the season.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

PEGGY TOWNSEND, who has worn a different evening dress in every one of her appearances at the Cafe Caprice so far, resumes her singing tonight after a week's absence because of the combination of a crowded social calendar and a cold. The society singer now employs an agent, who has so far secured for her client a year's radio offer.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Yesterday Peggy was honored guest at a cocktail party given by Eleanor Meem, a deb of last year. The hostess has the right idea as to how to be comfortable even though receiving over 300 guests—she had carefully arranged a row of chairs behind the line, where she sat in between arrivals, and when things got too wearing she simply took off her shoes.

THOUGH SOME people say it's bad luck to leave Christmas decorations up after New Year's, colored lights still blazed from the tree outside the Meem home, and other traditional trappings of Noel were in the living room. The hostess and the guest of honor looked quite Christmasy themselves, both wearing bright red dresses. Eleanor wore a shoulder corsage and Peggy a wristband of gardenias.

Mrs. Meem, who helped receive, was dressed in black, with a necklace and earrings of pearls. Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Peggy's mother, poured tea, wearing a pencil blue dress and a very smart black hat.

THE FOOD was on the substantial side and very much welcomed by people feeling jaded about thin sandwiches. The Meems' sandwiches were made of rye bread, with Swiss cheese, and there were also tiny biscuits filled with ham.

Among the guests were Mrs. Edward B. McLean, sister of the hostess, in a gray sports dress; Evalyn Walsh McLean, looking sophisticated as usual in a black silk frock, silver fox cape and small round hat with a red velvet strap; Angelica Lloyd, in a gray dress and hat with a pink velvet scarf which wound around her neck; Stellita Stapleton, another of the silver fox contingent.

Also Debs Sylvia Alexander and Elise Hill arriving together; George Williams, Pendleton Hogan, George Renchard, Bob Waggaman and Arthur Vandenberg, jr., among the bachelors; Mrs. William T. Mann in black with a sable scarf; Nancy Ordway, Eleanor Flood, in black with a tiny red velvet hat, and Emily Davis, also in black, but with no hat at all.

THERE WAS a touch of the hunt country atmosphere at the eggnog party given over the holiday week-end by Mr. and Mrs. William Beverley Mason, jr., in their apartment on Sixteenth street. Archibald Cary Randolph, father of the hostess and M. F. H. of the Piedmont Hunt, drove up from Virginia for the party, and Winston Frost, of Middleburg, was another guest. Mrs. Mason, who goes down to Warrenton to ride several times a week, has on a table in the hall a collection of silver trophies only rivaled in glitter by a row of handsome silver mint julep goblets on the sideboard.

The Masons' party was one of the most pleasant small gatherings of the holiday. The hosts recently returned after a stay of several weeks in Richmond, where Mr. Mason was sent by the Federal Housing Authority.

Among those who enjoyed the eggnog were Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin in a rust-colored dress with a hat of the same shade trimmed with coq feathers; Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Marion Shouse, Betty Hardie, who spent part of the holidays in New York; Gibbs Baker and Dr. William Mason, father of the host.

MRS. EVALYN WALSH McLEAN will entertain at a dinner on Friday at Friendship.

Cummingses Make Their Final Official Bow to Society

The retiring Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings made their final appearance in an official capacity at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. James V. Bennett in their Chevy Chase home. Mr. Bennett is commissioner of prison industries and the party was arranged for members of the Federal prison's staff.

Mrs. Ickes to Hold First 'At Home'

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will have a group of prominent women assisting her at her first "at home" tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6:30 o'clock at Headwaters Farm, her Olney, Md., home.

Pouring tea will be Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Alva B. Adams, Mrs. Charles McReynolds, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. George Dern, Mrs. Harry Baxter, Miss Grace Tully, Mrs. John C. Page, Mrs. Clark Foreman, Mrs. John Herrick, Mrs. Howard Gray and Miss Ann Dahlman, sister of the hostess.

Dance at Dunns' Climaxes Holidays For Sub-Deb Set

Holiday festivities for the subdeb set came to a gay finale last evening with the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn for their elder daughter, Mildred, who attends Foxcroft School.

There were about 110 future debutantes, 16 and 17 years of age, and their escorts present. The hall of the Dunn residence on Eighteenth street was banked with palms, and red roses were in the drawing room and dining room. Sidney's Orchestra played, and a buffet supper was served at midnight. The young hostess wore a pink taffeta frock.

Several dinners preceded the dance. Mrs. James Clement Dunn entertained for her daughter, Cynthia; Mrs. Alan Kirk, recently returned from the West Coast, gave a dinner for Deborah Kirk, and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes was hostess in honor of her niece, Miss Lydia Stokes.

Invitations Recalled

Owing to the illness of Maj. Parker West invitations have been recalled to the dinner he and Mrs. West were to have given on January 11 in honor of Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone.

Miss Fairchild Is Betrothed

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Dr. and Mrs. David Fairchild, of Cocoanut Grove, Fla., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nancy Bell Fairchild, to Dr. Marston Bates, of the staff of the Rockefeller Foundation, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn F. Bates, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Miss Fairchild is a granddaughter of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone and for many years a resident of Washington. She is a niece of Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society. She was born in Washington and attended the Montessori School and was graduated from the Masters School in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. She also attended the University of Miami and since graduation from the Institute of Musical Art in New York last spring has been doing concert work.

Dr. Bates was graduated from the University of Florida in 1927 and received his Ph. D. from Harvard in 1934. In 1936 he joined the staff of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation with headquarters in Tirana, Albania.

The wedding will take place January 11 at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Fairchild, and the couple will sail January 21 for Albania.

Woodrings and Holcombs Fete Friends and Associates Here

Secretary of War Entertains All Army Officers and Wives Stationed in This Area; Melissa and Brothers Steal Show

By Elizabeth Henney.

The social spotlight yesterday turned on two official receptions. Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring entertained for all Army officers and their wives, stationed in and near Washington, and the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb were "at home" to a number of their friends.

The Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Malin Craig, and Mrs. Craig assisted the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring in receiving. Mrs. Woodring wore floor-length princess model of black faille, fashioned with long sleeves, tight at the wrist, a V-neck line with lapel collar, and buttoned all down the front with buttons of the same material. At either lapel were corsages of small pink roses, which were part of the frock, but looked amazingly real.

Mrs. Craig was gowned in a deep purple crepe tea gown, floor length, with a silver lame applique on the sleeves and a clip of wrought silver. With this she wore a pearl necklace and a corsage of pale green orchids.

Both Mrs. Woodring and Mrs. Craig looked very regal, but the young lady who really stole the show was small Melisa Woodring. Aged 3½ years, and gowned in a fetching blue print frock, she had two escorts, her brothers, Marcus Coolidge Woodring, 4½, and Cooper Coolidge Woodring, who will be 2 next month.

Their father, shedding the dignity of his role as Secretary of War, left the receiving line and shared a private cookie party with them at a small coffee table in one corner of the drawing room.

Officers' Wives Among Those Assisting

Mrs. Roosevelt Sponsors Exhibit

The two branches of the Roosevelt family are united in one thing—sponsoring of Jo Davidson's sculpture. The First Lady heads patronesses for an exhibition of his portraits of Spanish loyalist leaders, opening at the Whyte Gallery tomorrow, and the same exhibit had its first showing in New York at Mrs. Roosevelt's Arden Gallery.

The works, which were executed by the artist during his stay in loyalist Spain last summer, are being shown in all the principal cities of the United States for benefit of the Spanish Children's Milk Fund, of which Dorothy Parker is chairman. In this city the showing is under auspices of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy. It will continue until January 16.

Other sponsors besides Mrs. Roosevelt are Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Lowell Mellett and Mrs. Leon Henderson.

Jo Davidson has rendered in bronze many of the world's outstanding political personalities, his subjects having included Mussolini, Litvinoff, Lloyd George, Massark, Benes, Primo de Rivera, Nicholas Murray Butler and Mayor LaGuardia.

Writers Hear Talk on Reich

Propaganda maps, such as are used in German schools, were displayed last night by Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt in a lecture on "Germany's Growing Pains" at the family night dinner of the D. C. branch of the National League of American Pen Women at the Grafton Hotel.

Mrs. Van Zandt, the former Lydia Van Hagen, known for articles and lectures on current literature, returned only a few weeks ago from spending six months in Central Europe with her husband. Mr. Van Zandt made an airline survey of that section and they visited Germany three times.

The Germans are so proud of what they are doing that there is no difficulty in obtaining information about their program, said Mrs. Van Zandt. They provide guides to show visitors schools, camps, museums and other institutions which are examples of results of the Hitler regime.

"I found Germany an armed camp," said Mrs. Van Zandt, "with capital, labor, industry and agriculture all mobilized to support the army. One feels sorry for the real German people when one realizes they are being dominated by the national socialist group of 4,000,000 which constitutes a small minority of the more than 78,000,000 population."

The maps she showed included one illustrating Reichfuhrer Hitler's plan for the return of the colonies and another, called the "Large Language Map of Middle Europe," outlining his plan for uniting all Germans.

She described the cooking classes conducted by the Women's Rights Party as part of the four-year plan. Women are taught to use corn and potato flour instead of wheat for their baking, to use cabbage in quantities and other articles which are plentiful in the country.

Following Mrs. Van Zandt's talk, Christine Kelly, a gifted young pianist, was presented and played a group of numbers. She is a pupil of Mme. Louise Coutinho.

Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the branch, presided at the dinner which was almost on the heels of the New Year's reception. Mrs. Van Zandt was introduced by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, who told of having met her 18 months ago in Manila at a party given by Mr. Van Zandt for her and Dr. Grosvenor, when they landed there on their way to the Orient aboard the China Clipper. Mrs. Van Zandt will speak before the Washington Club January 10 on a program in charge of Mrs. Grosvenor, when her subject will be "Airscapes Around the World."

Many Attend Mission Fete

Interest in the work of the Central Union Mission yesterday drew to the annual New Year's reception there a larger number of guests than ever before.

E. H. De Groot, jr., chairman, and William H. Ramsey, member of the board of directors, welcomed the guests. Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, headed the receiving line. She wore a trailing frock of black lace banded in satin and a wide corsage of natural gardenias. Assisting her were Mrs. J. H. Neal, Mrs. William H. Ramsey, Mrs. J. Carl Orebaugh, Miss Charlotte Darrow, Miss Isabel MacDonald, Mrs. Caroline B. Stephen, Mrs. W. H. Anderson, Miss Olive Cochran, Miss Gertrude Barber and Miss Edna Fussell.

At the coffee table was Mrs. Wilbur Ackley, of Philadelphia, mother of Mrs. Bennett who with Mr. Ackley has been spending the Christmas holidays at the mission. The Rev. Freely Rohrer, president of the Ministerial Council, represented that body.

Just prior to the opening of the reception, Mrs. Bennett and the Mision Glee Club quartet gave a half-hour radio program over Station WOL from the Mission chapel.

Mrs. Newcombe Honors Out-of-Town House Guests

Mrs. Frederick Newcombe entertained yesterday afternoon at her home 3214 Porter street at tea in honor of her house guest, Miss Pocahontas Staufft, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Miss Staufft has been visiting Mrs. Newcombe for the holidays and will return today to her home. Assisting yesterday at the tea table were Mrs. Horace Thorn, Mrs. Lawrence Conant, Miss Marie Stone and Mrs. J. Ninian Beale.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MISS ELIZABETH M. BARNES, national vice chairman of Junior American Citizens for the Daughters of the American Revolution, had as her guests during part of the Christmas holidays two girls from Bacon Hollow, Green County, Va., students of the school reopened there last year with the help of the Junior American Citizens committee of the D. A. R. Their visit in Washington was their first trip away from home.

They were Elsie Shifflitt, who was Miss Barnes' guest, and Eva Johnson, who visited Mrs. Lucy Day, of Arlington, Virginia State chairman of the committee, before joining Elsie here.

Miss Barnes took them to the Capitol, the Library of Congress, Smithsonian Institution, the White House, the Zoo and the movies. They told her they enjoyed everything but made few remarks and evinced almost no enthusiasm, except at the Zoo, where they seemed to be fascinated. They were so engrossed in watching the animals it was hard to persuade them to move from one cage to another. They found the monkey house so entertaining they stayed until almost time for the Zoo to close.

ALTHOUGH the girls had never seen a movie before, they seemed more impressed with the interior of the theater than with the picture, Miss Barnes says. Like many of the mountain people, they were so uncommunicative that it was difficult for her to tell whether or not they really enjoyed their stay and what, aside from the Zoo, they liked best.

Besides entertaining the girls, Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Day gave them Christmas gifts, the wrappings of which appeared to interest them more than the presents. It was the first time they had ever received wrapped gifts and their greatest pleasure seemed to be in unwrapping them.

THE CHRISTMAS TRIP provided for these two girls is typical of the interest members of the D. A. R. take in the children of the approved schools to which the organization gives support in the Southern mountain districts and elsewhere throughout the country. They not only help to provide the boys and girls with education, but they also take a personal interest in them as individuals, correspond with them and, when possible, provide the opportunities for them which other children in more fortunate circumstances enjoy.

The Green County project of the Junior American Citizens Committee is considered one of its outstanding achievements. Not only has it been instrumental in having the school reopened after it had been closed, owing to the poverty of the District, for nearly three years, but it also has provided seeds and tools for subsistence gardens, which both the pupils and their parents have worked, providing vegetables for the school lunches and for home use during the winter.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER, of Kansas, who is to introduce the Senate bill providing for national representation for the District, will address the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at its February meeting. His talk will be under the auspices of the Department of American Citizenship of which Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison is chairman.

AN ARTICLE on recreation in Czecho-Slovakia is included in the closing issue for 1938 of the Community Center Quarterly, of which Mrs. George C. Thorpe is editor. Mrs. Thorpe, who also is chairman of the Women's Safety Committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club, last summer visited the various countries of Central Europe and in company with the American Minister and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, attended the Sokol, which she describes in the article.

Plans for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Junior High School and Library are outlined in the first article in the Quarterly, written by Capt. H. S. Bishop, assistant engineer commissioner.

THE WOMAN'S COUNCIL of the Fifteenth Street Christian Church will have a dinner meeting Thursday at 6:15 with Mrs. Mary Jeter Longfellow, of Baltimore as guest speaker. Mrs. Longfellow is a former missionary to India. Following the meeting the board of church officers will have a session.

G. O. P. Lists 1938 Expense At $1,578,295

Receipts $5,000 Less; Democrats Put Year's Costs at $1,039,834

By the Associated Press.

The Republican National Committee reported yesterday it had received $1,572,985 and paid out $1,578,295 in 1938—a year which brought the party sizable gains in Congress and in the States.

The Democratic National Committee reported receipts of $1,041,668.96 and expenditures of $1,039,834.13 for the year.

The statements were filed with the House clerk, in accordance with the corrupt practices act.

After adding to its receipts a balance of $8,495 carried over from 1937, the Democratic committee figured it had a balance of $10,330 at the end of the year. But it also had unpaid obligations of $234,448.77.

The Democratic Committee reported payment of a $75,000 loan to the Bank of Manhattan, New York, on November 4. On the same day $100,000 was borrowed from the Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York.

The latter amount was listed among the debts along with $40,000 owed Sol Rosenblatt, of New York, and $9,280.79 for telephone services due the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Washington.

Speakers Bureau Has Profit

The Democratic National Congressional Committee reported contributions of $5,588 and expenditures of $3,629 for 1938, while the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, a separate group, took in $33,056 and spent an even $33,000.

The Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee said it had receipts of $161,050 for 1938 and had paid out $158,053.

It cost the Republicans $11,937 to run their national speakers bureau last year, but the Bureau's receipts added up to $12,500.

The largest contributions from individuals since a previous report was filed November 3 included:

Grange Assails 'Interference' With Congress

Farm Organization Hits Executive 'Pressure,' Lump Appropriations

The National Grange yesterday called for an end of "undue interference or pressure from the executive department" on Congress, and cessation of lump-sum appropriations to be expended at the discretion of the President.

In a letter, copies of which were sent to all members of Congress, the farm organization declared one of the most helpful things that could be done for the farmers would be restoration of employment in private industry.

"Just as the industrial worker is the best customer of the farmer," it said, "so the farmer is the best customer of the man engaged in industry. Neither can prosper while the other languishes."

Congress must put an end to the "lump-sum appropriation evil," said Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the Grange, who signed the letter, if it is "fully to regain its former prestige and independence. He deplored the sight of Congress members being compelled "to go, hat in hand," to the executive department to plead for "an equitable allotment of funds."

Pointing to the "growing menace of debt," the letter said that in the distribution of relief, administration of funds "secured by taxing all the people or by mortgaging their credit, should be placed on a nonpartisan basis."

Low prices of farm products were blamed principally on the fact that the approximately 11,000,000 unemployed and their "tens of millions of dependents" have very little purchasing power. With national income an estimated 25 per cent less than that of 1929, though the population has increased by some 9,000,000 in that period, farm prices cannot be expected to improve materially until more of the unemployed are put to work, the letter held.

82 Amateur Pilots Hop for Florida

Eighty-two amateur pilots left College Park Airport yesterday to wing southward on the second jump of their mass hop to the All-American Air Maneuvers at Miami.

Scheduled to take part in the Florida tournament Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the fliers planned to spend the night at Raleigh, N. C. All flying light "sport" planes, the pilots came from Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Canada.

King Attacks WPA Slum Survey as Waste of Money

The proposed WPA survey of Washington's slums was derided yesterday as "a waste of taxpayers' money" by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee.

His comment referred to the request of District WPA officials for $281,000 to employ 465 white-collared workers for a house-to-house survey. The information sought would form the basis for future low-cost housing projects under the Alley Dwelling Authority.

"What do a lot of young clerks know about housing" King asked. "Why don't they hire a half dozen engineers or builders to make the survey?

"It's disgraceful to waste the taxpayers' money on a project like this."

Schools Call 93,500 Back; Funds Short

Congress Urged To Approve More Money for Heating And Pay Rolls

District schools this morning will open doors to more than 93,500 youngsters reluctantly answering the call of clanging school bells after two weeks of freedom from schoolbook cares.

The schools are reopening with the bugaboo of early closing and payless furloughs for officials pushed in the background. Requests for additional funds to meet heat and light expenditures and salary obligations have been included in the first deficiency bill to Congress and await only action of that body.

The number of students laying aside their Christmas gifts for books today will be a slight increase over that for the outset of 1938, N. A. Danowsky, schools statistician, reported.

This increase, approximately 250, is unusual, however, he said, in view of the drop in elementary school population because of a general decline in the birth rate. He said that senior high school enrollments at the present time show an increase of about 700 over the same period last year, while junior high enrollments show an increase of approximately 200.

The loss in elementary school enrollments was expected to more than offset increases in the higher levels, Danowsky said.

Meanwhile, school officials this week will prepare to go before Congress, possibly next week, to defend requests for additional appropriations of $36,788 which District Commissioners have approved for the first 1939 deficiency bill to Congress.

Inclusion of the additional funds was approved after Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou reported December 21 that schools would be forced to close periodically in the coming year and officials and clerks would be furloughed at intervals without pay because of insufficient funds.

Operating under a program of stringent economy imposed by the last Congress, which attached a rider to the school appropriation for heat and light, stating that school custodians should not exceed budget limitations, school officials asserted that it will be virtually impossible to remain within the slashed appropriations for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Buildings in Good Shape

Assistant Superintendent of Schools J. J. Crane, in charge of business affairs, said yesterday that all buildings are in "top shape" and that heating plants this year are in good repair.

Students at the Dennison Vocational School for Girls returning today will enter a new, modern building, recently completed and dedicated at Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, opposite Roosevelt High School.

During the holidays, equipment and records were moved from the old building at Thirteenth and S streets northwest into the new structure, which will have facilities for 300 girls.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of junior high and vocational schools, said the new building has increased facilities for instruction in cosmetology, cafe and tearoom management, handicrafts and other trades for women.

Regular meeting of the Board of Education, scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed until January 11 to give school officials sufficient time to organize reports and recommendations to be placed before the board, Dr. Ballou said.

MacNeil to Head D. C. Adventists At Conference

Headed by the Rev. J. W. MacNeil, of Washington, district president, delegates from 45 churches in the Potomac Conference will attend the quadrennial evangelistic convention of the Columbia Union Conference of the Seventh-Day Adventists in Pittsburgh January 10 to 12.

The delegation from this district, comprising Washington, Virginia and Western Maryland, include the Revs. J. B. Ford, W. B. Hill, and H. J. Detwiler, of Washington; A. H. Johns and J. F. Anderson, Takoma Park; F. B. Jensen, Richmond, and the following departmental secretaries: Rev. A. O. Dart, F. E. Thumwood and J. E. Edwards, all of Washington.

The meetings will be addressed by the Rev. Messrs. Detwiler; J. L. McElhany, president of the world conference; M. N. Campbell, leader of the North American division conference; L. E. Froom, of the Ministerial Association, and W. L. Burgan, publicity director.

Pastor to Leave For New Charge

The Rev. J. F. Anderson, pastor of the Takoma Park Seventh Day Adventist Church, Takoma Park, Md., will leave tonight for Fort Worth, Tex., to assume the pastorate of the denominational church there, he said yesterday.

His resignation from the Takoma Park pastorate was necessitated by ill health, he said. The Rev. A. B. Russell, of Houston, will come to Takoma next week to succeed him, the Rev. Anderson said.

He announced that in 1938 free-will offerings from members of the church totaled $80,371.28, an all-time record for any one Seventh Day Adventist Church. He further reported that since 1928 the church has paid $618,632.65 into the treasury of the Potomac Conference.

Fire Engine's Siren Call Costs Envoy's Daughter Her Dog

An important, although underslung, little dog is lost in Washington today because she saw her first fire engine—and chased it.

Leichen, who is a low-built dachshund puppy owned by Miss Marie Henriette Straten-Ponthoz, 17, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador to the United States, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, was strolling with her mistress yesterday at the corner of Connecticut and M streets northwest.

All went well until the siren of a fire-engine cut the air and a parade of red-and-silver equipment swirled by. Liechen responded immediately, giving mad chase to the procession until it and she were out of sight.

Firemen are looking under station-stoves and inspecting hose-coils. Policemen are scanning the sidewalks at ankle-height. The theory is that Liechen, handicapped by short, although twinkling legs, is still on her way to the fire.

Maryland Democrats to Caucus Today

Annapolis Meeting Tonight to Elect Heads of Houses In Assembly

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 2.—Democratic members of the Maryland Legislature, holding an overwhelming majority in both houses, will hold a caucus tomorrow night to nominate candidates for key positions in the assembly.

This will be a prelude to convening of the 90-day session Wednesday, when Republican Gov. Harry W. Nice will deliver the last message of his four-year term. Democratic Gov.-elect Herbert R. O'Conor will be inaugurated January 11.

O'Conor has indicated he would not attempt to dictate selection of the presiding officers of the Legislature or the chairmen of the key committees. It is certain, however, that men sympathetic to him will be elected.

Brice May Head Senate

It has been the custom of past Legislatures to have the presiding officer of one of the houses come from Baltimore City and the other from one of the counties.

This year Senator Arthur H. Brice, of Kent County, has been indorsed by Eastern Shore Democratic legislators for president of the State Senate to succeed Lansdale G. Sasscer, who retired to run for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Many observers contend Brice's election is certain. There is no such certainty, however, about the nomination for Speaker of the House, a post held last year by Emanuel Gorfine, of Baltimore, now a State senator-elect.

Five in House Contest

Delegate Thomas E. Conlon, of Baltimore, appeared tonight to be the outstanding city candidate for speakership. Delegates Walter J. Locke, John Conry, Lawrence Appel and Leon Abramson, all of Baltimore, also have been mentioned for the post.

Leading contender for chairman of the powerful Senate finance committee is Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Queen Anne County.

Farm Chiefs Back Clarke

Among them he listed Harry N. Nuttle, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation; Clarence M. Roberts, legislative agent for the Southern Maryland tobacco industry; Miss Mary E. W. Risteau, former State senator from Harford County, and J. W. Snoody, president of the Maryland Poultry Council.

Also in the running for the floor leadership are Delegates P. Elliott Burroughs, of Wicomico County; Leo Moore, of Harford County, and John White, of Prince Georges County.

Md. County Ends Year Without One Typhoid Fatality

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 2.—A new method for detecting typhoid fever "carriers" proved so successful that for the first time in the history of Washington County there was not a single death in 1938 from the disease.

Dr. W. Ross Cameron, health officer here, said that the new method for picking up carriers of typhoid germs had enabled him to locate these carriers in a comparatively brief period of a few days, where, under the old system, it was often months and sometimes years of work before a "carrier" could be identified as such. A "carrier" is a person whose system is polluted with typhoid germs although not ill himself, explained the health officer.

In 1930 there were 97 cases of typhoid, and 10 deaths, and in 1931, when the public health unit was established here, there were 8 deaths here. The decline has been gradual, and in 1938 there were five cases and no deaths.

Washington Sanitarium Baby First of '39 Boys

Washington's first baby boy of the New Year, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shepherd, 1236 Raum street northeast, was born at Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.

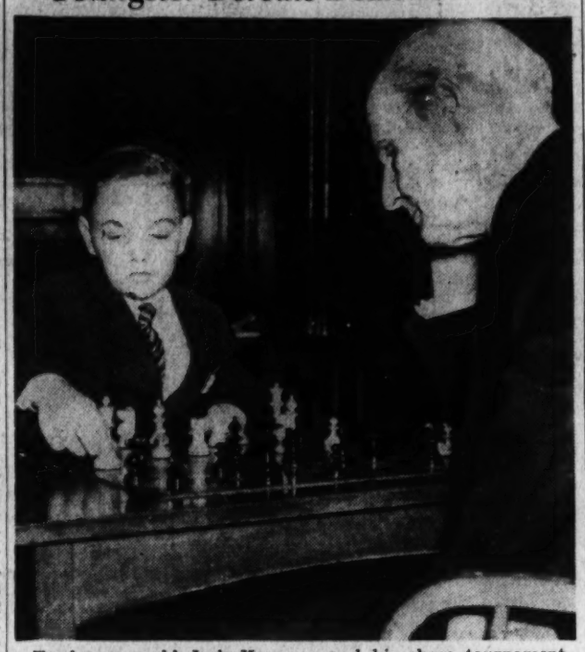
In the list of New Year's Day births on Monday, The Post incorrectly stated the boy was born at Montgomery County General Hospital.

Fourth Seeks Seat Of Goldsborough

Baltimore, Jan. 2 (AP).—State Senator-elect Thomas F. Johnson, of Worcester County, announced today he would be a candidate for Congress in the First District "if and when" Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, the incumbent, receives a Federal judgeship in Washington.

So certain have Eastern Shore Democrats become that Goldsborough will get the D. C. appointment that three possible candidates to succeed him have already appeared. The three are State Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Queen Annes County; Olin R. Higgins, former State Senator from Dorchester County, and State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., who retires from office January 16.

Youngster Defeats Dean at Chess



Twelve-year-old Jack Kays, opened his chess tournament career by defeating the dean of Washington players, Watson B. Mundelle, 83, in the latter's annual open tournament at the Y.M.C.A. Jack, who lives at 1900 F street northwest, was the youngest of 22 players who competed against Mundelle, and the first to win. His victory required 21 moves, and he received a book on "Modern Chess" as a prize. Jack, who learned the game from his brother, Robert, 16, two years ago, has played about 75 games. "He's a young wonder," said Mundelle, who has played thousands of matches in his 46-year chess career in Washington.

Central Y.M.C.A.'s Open House Attracts Throng of 4,000

Athletic Contests, Games, Receptions, Dances, Concerts and Movies Entertain Association's Guests

The Central Y. M. C. A., Seventeenth and G streets northwest, held "open house" yesterday for 4,000 guests, one of the largest crowds ever to attend the annual New Year affair.

Activities actually began at 10 a. m. in the boys building, but principal events started at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and went on without a break until late last night.

More than 550 members of the "Y" participated in the program of athletic contests, games, receptions, dances, concerts and movies.

One of the main attractions of the afternoon was a juvenile concert, featuring the youthful talents of Charlton Myer, 13, a pianist; Dotty Burch, 10, violinist; Gertrude Troutman, 10, pianiste; Calbot Myer, 11, vocalist, and Preble Earl Donoho, 8.

Topping the evening concert were the maturer talents of Fleurette Joffrie, opera and radio soprano. Others on the program were Dorothy Radde Emery, piano soloist; Edwin L. Rogers, barytone; the Conklin Orchestra, and the Sentinal Quartet, composed of Fred Dennison, first tenor; David Manley, second tenor; Sam Cotton, barytone, and George P. Gunn, bass.

Southeastern University held its annual reception and tea dance during the afternoon after dormitory residents had held a reception for relatives and friends.

So vast was the sports program that many of the principal events were held simultaneously. A jiu-jitsu exhibition under the direction of Joseph Chiang, Chinese instructor of Jiu-jitsu at the Y. M. C. A., drew a large crowd, as did a tennis exhibition by Barney Welsh and Anthony Latona, net stars; wrestling by Floyd Rapp and D. S. Armstrong, and a diving show in the "Y" pool.

For further entertainment of guests, the program inluded chess and checker matches, bowling, a sound motion picture, three showings of the motion picture "Show Boat," and exhibitions of art and craft work, the latter in the boys' department.

The open house program was concluded with the annual New Year's Day dance in the men's gymnasium, sponsored by the Dormitory Council, the Athletic Council and the Y Men's Club. Arthur C. Pearson was chairman of the open house committee.

City's 'Oldest Inhabitants' Plead for Vote

'Message to Congress' Asks Representation And Electroal Voice

National representation for the District of Columbia was urged yesterday by the Association of Oldest Inhabitants at its New Year meeting at the old Fire Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest.

In a "message to Congress," read by Fred A. Emery, vice president of the organization, the group voiced a plea in behalf of voteless residents of the District for representation in both Houses of Congress and the electoral college.

The message cited the extent to which citizens of Washington contribute to the "upbuilding and maintenance of the National Capital" and concluded with an appeal that Congress, at its coming session, enact legislation granting these voteless residents a chance for representation.

Emery pointed out that Washington pays more in taxes than many states and objected to the general impression that its citizens "live by the grace and indulgence of a paternalistic Federal Government."

The meeting concluded with a review of 1938 highlights by John Clagett Proctor, chronicler of the association.

'Gate Crashing' At White House Closed Incident

Secret Service authorities yesterday denied that a "shakeup" of the White House guard force is contemplated as a result of the New Year's Eve "gate crashing"" by two Washington school children.

Frank J. Wilson, Secret Service chief, said investigation had been completed and no further action is anticipated.

Yesterday a young woman tried to gain entrance through the front door of the Executive Mansion. The woman was restrained by Secret Service agents who said she was from New Jersey but refused to reveal her identity.

Meanwhile, the two youngsters—Joseph Meisel, 16, of 4121 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Miss Beatrice White, 16, of 5367 Twenty-eighth street northwest—are proud possessors of the Presidential autograph they obtained by walking unmolested into second floor White House living quarters.

Baby Death Rate Drops in County, Clinic Credited

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Jan. 2.—A baby health clinic which a group of women established in Hagerstown three years ago was credited by Dr. W. Ross Cameron for the reduction in the infant mortality rate which brought Washington County's death rate under the State and national rate for the first time in 1938. In one year the infant mortality rate was reduced from 87 deaths per thousand live births to 50 deaths.

A group of members of the Women's Club set up the clinic in a firehall here, enlisted the help of a baby specialist and went to work in an area where infant mortality rate had been unusually high. Only children from families where the income is under $15 weekly are eligible to attend the clinic.

House Group Renews War On Pollution

Cleansing of Streams Held Major Factor In Conservation; Vinson Bill Lauded

By the Associated Press.

Renewed demand for Federal anti-stream pollution legislation came yesterday from the House committee studying wildlife conservation problems.

In a report prepared for submission to Congress today Chairman Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, placed high on the list of recommendations enactment of a measure to accomplish the objects of the so-called Vinson stream pollution bill passed by the last Congress and vetoed by President Roosevelt, with provisions to meet the President's objections.

The committee also recommended:

Appropriation of additional funds for continuation of a Nation-wide wildlife conservation program:

Continuation of the excise tax on arms and ammunition;

Fur Resources "Alarming"

That all possible emphasis be placed on the present "alarming condition" of the Nation's fur resources and action be taken looking toward replacement and conservation;

That the migratory bird conservation act be amended to authorize seizure of automobiles, boats, guns and other equipment used in unlawful taking of wild birds or animals on Federal refuges and sanctuaries, and to give power to the courts to order such seized property forfeited as an addition to any fine that may be imposed;

That the Lacy act be amended to remove the provision requiring specific contents of the package shipped in interstate or foreign commerce to be labeled on the outside of the package;

That in the promulgation of Federal shooting regulations for the 1939 season consideration be given to permitting the use of a limited number of live-goose decoys.

Robertson said the committee has been "convinced that one of our chief conservation problems, and the greatest problem in attempting to restore aquatic resources, is the ever-increasing menace of stream pollution. * * *"

Agencies Need Funds

The committee reported the Biological Survey needs additional personnel in wildlife refuge administration, and funds for research on wildlife problems, especially on fur bearers, and to complete its refuge program.

The Bureau of Fisheries, the report said, needs additional funds for a well-balanced program on a year-to-year basis for construction of additional fish cultural facilities and laboratories; for a research vessel authorized in 1924; for prompt printing and dissemination of information; and for personnel.

The Forest Service needs funds for increased personnel; for buying, exchanging and raising game for transplanting and restocking purposes, and for additional land for winter range.

The Park Service needs additional personnel for wildlife management and research, and additional land for year-round range.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Noel Coward Contributes Another Hit to Season

'Set to Music' Reported a 'Wow' by Expert; Vaudeville Still Boasts Real Novelties; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT is the rusty-haired Mr. Fred Spooner, one of the better of the theater's peregrinating stentors, who drops by the drama desk on a clear and too-warm New Year's holiday, to say that all is well with the Capital's immediate outlook in the precincts of the so-called "legitimate" drama.

BELL

Mr. Spooner, of course, is primarily concerned with the advent, on January 16, of Helen Hayes in a return engagement of "Victoria Regina," the Gilbert Miller production of the Laurence Housman play that had its premiere on the stage of the National Theater 'way back yonder, when Miss Hayes was sure that she was ill-equipped to do justice to the role of the British Empire's beloved sovereign. It is, perhaps, to be set down as one of the hallmarks of greatness that Miss Hayes felt sure on her memorable opening night in "Victoria Regina" that she had given a miserable performance. Deeply impressed with the magnitude of her undertaking, Miss Hayes was on the verge of tears that "first night" and was sure that she had let Mr. Miller and her public down by an incompetent impersonation of the ruler who presided over the destinies of England for a round 60 years.

The following day's reviews in the local press largely corrected her misapprehensions. One wonders what would have happened to one of the contemporary theater's most satisfying exhibits if Miss Hayes had adhered to her impulsive inclination to quit the whole business as something beyond her distinguished capabilities. Washington's most brilliant contribution to the illustrious list of "names" who have achieved greatness upon the stage has made theatrical history in "Victoria Regina." She must know that by now, whatever her qualms may have been on that tremulous first night.

But "Victoria Regina," while uppermost, is not the only theatrical item that engages Mr. Spooner's interest. On a jaunt down from Montreal, where the temperature was 2 degrees below zero—br-r-r-r!—he found time to drop off in Boston and view a performance of Beatrice Lillie in Noel Coward's new musical fol-de-rol, "Set to Music," which comes to the National next week, a short leap ahead of Miss Hayes' latter-day classic. Mr. Spooner's brief appraisal of "Set to Music" is that it is a star-spangled "wow," the most adroitly tailored of her serio-comic stature of all the vehicles in which Miss Lillie, Lady Peel to you, has been seen on the American rostrums. Mr. Coward would be like that.

Made American Debuts in 1924

I mean to say that after the overwhelming success of his "Tonight at 8:30," in which he starred with Gertrude Lawrence for a fortnight at the National prior to the Broadway engagement, it would be just like Mr. Coward to come through with another scintillant hit. It is more or less a habit with him.

It would be interesting to know how many are able to recall that it was in the "Charlot Revue," in 1924, that both Beatrice Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence made their first bids for recognition on the New York stage. I don't remember all of Miss Lillie's songs in that amiable production, but Miss Lawrence's outstanding hit was the "Limehouse Blues," which has endured down to the comparative present as a fine example of atmospheric composition.

Mr. Coward, a visitor to Washington on the occasion of the Lunts' appearance at the National in "The Sea Gull," in all probability will be here for the Washington premiere of Miss Lillie's latest lark. I suggest that the local citizenry tune up its vocal cords to cries of "author, author" for use on opening night.

So today at 1:30 p. m., just to impress upon the minds of the guys and gals of the local drama desks that one year isn't much different from any other, the Loew interests, egged on by that incorrigible young punster, Master J. Raymond Bell—no relation—will launch their annual eye-strain by prescreening "The Duke of West Point," next week's major attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is a release that is said to do for the Army what "Navy Blue and Gold" did for the Navy. If that promise holds up, "The Duke of West Point" should turn out to be quite a picture. More of this later—possibly tomorrow, if the senses hold out! Or are they nonsenses?

Jack Still Glorifies the Drumstick!

It was no longer ago than New Year's Eve that Phil Lampkin and his charming wife, Kay, were asking me what had become of our mutual friend Jack Powell, the blackface syncopationist, who has elevated the drumstick to the importance of a symphonic instrument. I didn't know, at the moment. But now I do.

With his usual fidelity to those who follow his career with interest, Jack mails me a paper from Oslo, Norway—or is it Sweden?—that is totally incomprehensible except for the red-pencil note that he moved into the Savoy Hotel, in London, yesterday to titillate the night-farers with his broken-rhythm drumming. There were a lot of New Year's greeting involved in the message, but that is aside from the point. The point is that Jack is doing all right. His many friends in Washington will be glad to know that.

Occasionally there come along acts to the vaudeville stage that stand out in bold relief as something distinctly out of the ordinary. Such a turn was offered recently on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater in the prodigious juggling feats accomplished by Boy Foy—and what a name that continues to be!—and its like is repeated this seven-day period by Raymond Wilbert and his hoops, or bicycle rims, or whatever they are. Mr. Wilbert has devised a means of making inanimate things living and his adventures with a "passle" of seemingly innocuous circumferences are something to see. The Slade Brothers—all three of them—of course, headline the stage goings-on and by their very name prompt the observation that their antics "Slade" the customers at the opening show.

Holiday Week-End Hits Ceiling

Incidentally, all of the downtown theaters did monumental business over the New Year's week-end. The early closing of the bars—not that anybody drinks in this high-flown province of the drayma—worked to the advantage of the upholstered seats and comfortable luxuries of the midtown cathedrals of the gelatines. Records were smashed right and left, and every mangerial face wore a smile from 'ere to 'ere—or you can spell it "ear to ear," if you wish.

The nature of the bills may have had something to do with it. A casual appraisal of the available diversions would indicate that there is not a poor show in town at this gleeful season of the year. Any marquee sign to which you may see fit to succumb will repay large dividends in worthy entertainment. And that goes even down to Ninth street, where old Col. James Jeremiah Lake is presenting one of the best burlesque bills of the year, with Valerie Parks as star. She's on this page today.

Something unique in the history of annual reviews of the year is the compilation of important events made by the Paramount Newsreel, now on view at the Warner Brothers' Earle and Metropolitan Theaters. Called "1938—Year of Contrasts," this film embraces everything from vital historical events to slapstick comedy. The reel runs only a meager 13 minutes, but into this brief running time has been crowded so much that is of primary importance to the American citizen, that Zone Manager John J. Payette, of Warners, has allotted it extra running time on his daily schedules. It is worth it.

Prominent Among the Stars of the New Year's Bills

ON SCREEN AND STAGE NEXT WEEK AND THIS

Above—Franciska Gaal, Bing Crosby and Shirley Ross in "Paris Honeymoon," coming to the Earle screen next week as chief feature of an elaborate program. Miss Gaal has not been seen since her American debut as the little Dutch girl in Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Buccaneer." Inset—Valerie Parks, the blonde beauty now regaling audiences at the Gayety Theater, as star of her own troupe of burlesquers

Up Budgets In Quality Film Drive

In keeping with a new studio policy for greater entertainment quality in its product, Twentieth Century-Fox has added $450,000 to the budgets of three new pictures.

After viewing the first rough cut of "The Little Princess," Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck ordered $300,000 spent on added scenes.

With the budget of the picture already over a million dollars, the added scenes will bring the film's total cost to a point far in excess of any Temple production to date. Previous to this Shirley's most pretentious vehicle was "Wee Willie Winkie," with a million-plus budget.

Musical Numbers

The $300,000, Zanuck explained, will be used in shooting musical numbers in addition to the two that are already in the film, and in filming elaborate outdoor scenes.

For the sake of thrills, another $100,000 has been set aside for "Tail Spin," the spectacular drama of women racing pilots in which Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly and Joan Davis are starred.

Under Roy Del Ruth's direction, filming of the additional thrill sequences have already started at the studio.

Famed Racers

Eight of the nation's foremost racing pilots have been recalled for work in the added scenes. They include Paul Mantz and Genevieve Haughen, technical advisors on the picture; Tony Le Vier, winner of the Greve Trophy Race at Cleveland this year; Marion McKeen, Art Chester, Lee Williams, Harry Crosby and "Ace" Bruganier. They will pilot their own speed ships in the new sequences.

Third on the list to get an increased budget is "The Three Musketeers," starring the three Ritz Brothers and Don Ameche in a musical version of the famed Dumas novel. Fifty thousand dollars will be spent on an added musical number.

Grapewin a Heavy After 22 Years

After 22 years, veteran actor Charley Grapewin will again act a "meanie."

That long ago, he did the "heavy" in a Broadway show, "Baggage Check." Since then Grapewin has always been a likable old man, on stage and screen. However, his current role, Doc Health in "Burn 'Em Up O'Connor," will picture him as a heavy, double-crosser and murderer.

A Versatile Lad

TERRY KILBURN,

who made his American screen debut in "Lord Jeff," played Tiny Tim in "A Christmas Carol" and now is to be seen as the juvenile in "Sweethearts," on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater

Donlevy Dares 'Deadly' Role; Escapes Hurts

Brian Donlevy recently played the role of the man who gets whipped in Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific" without serious physical injury.

The role to date has had a checkered path, passing first from Charles Bickford to J. Carroll Naish and then to Donlevy, who stepped into it when a prior commitment for "Federal Offense" prevented Naish from answering the "Union Pacific" call.

The role had earlier been rejected by Bickford, despite a contract offer of $20,000, when the redheaded actor learned that he would have to face a 25-foot bullwhip in the hands of Akim Tamiroff. Bickford said that he had been injured enough in pictures, having been bitten and clawed by lions, chawed by alligators, all within the past three years.

But Tamiroff, meanwhile, has been practicing for three months with the rawhide under the tutelage of Dave Kashner, and is described as a deadly marksman at 25 feet.

Among his recent exploits was snapping cigarettes out of the mouths of University of Detroit football players when they came to the studio and challenged his prowess.

So he performed today amid a scene of rococo frontier splendor. It was a Cheyenne gambling tent of the sixties, replete with gilt mirrors, brazen pictures and oil-lamp chandeliers. Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea and Lynne Overman were there, along with several hundred gamblers, trackiaying "paddies" and ladies, who moved with detached but amiable ardor from one table to another.

Gayety

The times are, indeed, few and far between when the ballyhoo and fanfare accorded an entertainer prove themselves to have been justified, but in the case of Valerie Parks, who is playing the Gayety Theater this week, we can say with unbounded enthusiasm that this artiste lives up to all advance hullabaloo.

Valerie, first of all, is a very pretty girl—blonde. We've seen some very stunning blondes at this theater but your reviewer can't recall the time when a revue had as its star such an attractive young woman as Miss Parks. Not only is Valerie pretty, but she dances extremely well, wears some original and charming costumes and, above all, has loads of personality.

Funny Joe DeRita and his comedy sidekick, Harry "Boob" Myers, have charge of the comedy situations and do very well with the abundance of material they have at their command. Particularly amusing is the pint-sized Mr. DeRita, his comedy and wit proving different, funny, and lacking, for the most part, any questionable humor. Harry Jackson and debonair Jack Ensley are most competent in their respective straight-men roles.

The bill, in addition to Miss Parks, has some other stunners in the persons of Crysal Cook, Pat Joyce and Carol Drake. Miss Drake, a newcomer, is easy on the eyes and presents some fetching beauty parades.

Completing the cast of a very entertaining revue is Dorothy Sevier, one of the Wheel's best "talking women;" Franklin Hopkins, whose fine voice adds much to musical interludes, and Slim Lancaster, a sepia youth, whose dancing adds much to the bill.

Trans-Lux

"Ferdinand the Bull," held over at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, sets the pace for the holiday show, though it is pressed hard for leading honors by at least two of the other features, the News Pictorial, with such shots as the historic final session of the Lima Pan-American Conference, the First Radio Newspaper, Uncle Sam Mending his Defence Fences, and the Review of Outstanding News Events of 1938, and a short subject "Bird Dogs," showing lovable, intelligent setters, cockers and spaniels as puppies, and then as they are schooled to quarter, point and retrieve. This sequence is beautiful and affecting, and at the end it wins approving applause.

Another series demonstrates the frauds as practiced by dishonest spiritualist mediums, and then Walt Disney showing step by step the process of making his cartoons and including a flash from "Snow White."

The travelogue is to the canyon country of our West, and this setting makes possible a very colorful and beautiful picture.

Conan Doyle Novel Proves Film 'Natural'

'Hound of Baskervilles' Seems to Have Been Written for Screen

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Jan. 2. — Sherlock Holmes pulled on his double-billed hunting cap, clamped his bulldog pipe between his teeth and went hunting for a murderer.

The humble Dr. Watson stayed close beside him and if the final result doesn't keep you glued to yor theater seat until the last fade-out, then what appears to be a peculiarly happy collaboration will have been in vain.

The late A. Conan Doyle, of course, wrote the original script, entitled "The Hound of the Baskervilles." He had no idea it would be made into a movie, because there were no such things when he wrote his detective yarns, but the experts at Twentieth Century-Fox said he might as well have written "The Hound" directly for the cameras.

"It's a lead-pipe cinch to put Doyle on celluloid," Director Sidney Lanfield reported, "because he wrote more directly perhaps than any other novelist, before or after. When Doyle came to a difficult situation, such as a peculiarly nasty murder, he never described it as such. He always let dialogue of his characters put across the idea and that's exactly what we have to do in pictures."

Rathbone as Sherlock

To play the part of the great Holmes, Fox selected Basil Rathbone, the tall, suave Britisher. To an old Sherlock Holmes fan, such as ourself, this seemed to be an inspired piece of casting. Rathbone looks exactly like the man we always have imagined the old master deducer to be.

For Dr. Watson, the studio chose Nigel Bruce, the English character actor. That seemed to be a good choice, too, because we've always thought of the doctor as an intelligent, but slow-thinking man.

Shooting of the first scene started at 9 a. m. in Sherlock's comfortable diggin's, at 221 Baker street, London. Holmes and the good doctor were having tea and muffins, served by Holmes' faithful servant, Mary Gordon.

From 8 until 11 the master detective and his assistant discussed the crime, sipped tea and munched muffins, almost continually, while the experts fussed with the backgrounds, the lights, and the dialogue.

That was okay with Sherlock and the doctor. They'd both read the script beforehand, so they didn't eat any breakfast.

Star Pre-empts a "Prop"

One of the props was Sherlock's curve-stemmed pipe. Fox spent $20 for a handsome new one, imported from England. Sherlock immediately filled it with tobacco and puffed it all morning. This was tough on his tongue because the pipe never had seen tobacco before, but he bore up under its acrid fumes in true Holmes fashion.

"Sure, you won't get sick?" asked the anxious Lanfield, with one eye on the time clocks.

"Not old Sherlock," said Rathbone. "It's an elegant pipe. What I want to know is whether you'll let me keep it after the picture is finished."

Lanfield said that would be setting a bad precedent, but that since he was forced to give a child actor in his last picture a tricycle, he guessed the stockholders wouldn't complain if Sherlock kept his pipe.

Studio Has a Problem

Rathbone, who lately has been receiving top-billing in some of the most diverse pictures, said it was something of a jolt to get up this morning and find himself sitting peacefully in front of a coal fire, deducing the facts in a murder.

"For the last month I've been out at Universal working with monsters inside of dungeons in 'The Son of Frankenstein,'" he said. "I didn't finish up until last night at 9 and all these people here with normal bodies and faces that aren't colored blue, simply don't seem real to me yet."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 2.—The old year certainly ended in a mess of parties, from which none of us has quite recovered. Adrian's being the most opulent, I'll start with that. After seeing his presents, you wondered if any were left for anyone else in the world. This being his first Christmas since falling in love with Janet Gaynor he celebrated colossally. He gave her a ruby ring that looked like a drop of blood, an antique Chinese spray of flowers with leaves so delicate a mere piff could have blown them to atoms. And half a dozen pearls shooting off at the sides. Three necklaces. A five-strand pearl with turquoise and sapphires that came from a Maharajah's collection. Four antique gold bracelets and four dinner gowns, all made exactly alike, in different materials and color combinations.

HEDDA HOPPER

One which looked like handknit gold, but was so simple all it was really was a shirtwaist dress right down to the ground. The jewelry matched each gown. These are just among the important ones. And Janet's mother got almost as many as Janet. He gave me a 3-inch gold mesh bracelet interwoven with crystals, and he and Janet together added half a dozen pieces of Bristol glass to go with my collection.

Only very old friends were there, some of us have Christmas'ed together for 20 years. Edith Hughes was heartbroken because she had ordered a 25-pound turkey from North Dakota which didn't arrive on time.

Speaking of turkeys, I just heard the story of the Indian woman who lives here in a million-dollar house. She weighs 630 pounds, and stows away a 25-pounder all alone. What wouldn't a glamour gal give for a capacity like that!

The luncheon at Omar Kiam's was one of the highlights of the holidays. He was entertaining for Belle Daube, former actress, but now buyer for one of the Fifth avenue shops, who had flown out for a week's visit with all her old friends. Next to Marlene Dietrich's sheets, my most beautiful present came from Omar—an American Beauty velvet hostess gown, which I know perfectly well my grandchildren—if I'm ever lucky to have any—will fight over.

Lenore Coffee and husband, Bill Cowan, have worked out a perfect design for living. They built their home in the middle of four acres in Brentwood, with stables, horses for the children, and their house contains two marble fireplaces bought eight years ago when the old St. Vincent's Hospital was torn down. If that isn't planning ahead.

C. Aubrey Smith and the Boris Karloffs were there, too. And so was Georgie Kane—who's playing with Bette Davis in "Juarez." Bette told me she's wearing the most beautiful costumes she's ever had, but her part doesn't match the gowns.

Erroll Flynn-Lili Damita's open house carried on without the aid of Adian Roark or Liz Whitney. The Flynns looked like cooing doves.

Nancy Lee was entertaining Allison Randall, Denis O'Keefe, Richard Greene and Lloyd Pantages when her former husband, Ed Willis, walked in with a little more Christmas cheer.

Eddie Lowe stopped by to say "Merry Christmas" to wife Rita, but didn't stay. Her former husband, Albert Kaufman, helped entertain her guests.

It looks as though Gretchen Hearst and Willie Donahue will be one very soon. Don Topping's operation on his leg was more serious than anybody knows—he may be crippled. He's given his wife, Alleen Judge, permission to go back to her career, if she wants to.

The Bob Montgomerys entertained the Wallie Rothackers, Warner Baxters, Ronnie Colmans, Elliott Nugents, Brain Aherne and dozens of others.

Merle Oberon had a week's rest from "Wuthering Heights." She was making an exit over the fence when a ferocious dog caught her ankle and held her back. Naturally, they had a trained dog, who didn't bite her hard enough for her to depict pain. She asked a property man to twist her ankle—he did and it gave her a week in bed. That's one way of getting a vacation—wish I knew the name of that man!

Andrea Leeds is on her own feet again. Now all they have to do is to get the Heifetz story ready and she'll go back to work.

The Earl Carroll opening should have been one of the greatest events of the town. But unfortunately the show wasn't ready. Everything went wrong. Girls sang into dead microphones, the orchestra couldn't make up its mind whether to stay in sight, or to disappear into the basement, so they keep rehearsing it before the audience. Part of the scenery fell down. It was just too bad, because it's a beautiful place and the world's conception of what a Hollywood night club should look like. Food was delicious, well served and I've rarely seen so many important stellar names under one roof before.

But the Russians furnished the gayest party of the week, Albertina Rasch and husband, Dmitri Tiomkin. People came for eggnog and were swept out after breakfast. It brought out all the little boy in Director Frank Capra. He beat the drums, played the xylophone, guitar and even took a turn at the piano. Jeritza sang as did many others.

Ronnie Colman could have had first prize for his dancing—you've never seen anyone as gay as Ronnie since he's married. He added to his wife, Benita Hume's, collection of aquamarines, her favorite stone. Her engagement ring was an aquamarine instead of the proverbial diamond. Frances Marion and Jimmy Wales led off with the Lambeth Walk, and nobody had ever seen Frances dance before. But it was that kind of a party.

Well, here we are at Santa Anita—and another milestone under the dam—with a couple of Hail, Hail, the gangs all here—and Oi we're off with one foot into 1939.

This Morning

POVICH

This department is being accused of inconsistency by a correspondent who hauls off and writes: "To me it seems you displayed a bit of inconsistency and possibly prejudice when you tried to build up a case against the National League because of its practice of buying up so-called American League discards.'"

The two leagues are on a par, in the opinion of Mr. Elmer Dobberstein, of 2517 K street northwest, who adds: "But to get back to my argument of inconsistency in your column—for some time you have been brandishing in the public prints the fact that Bonura and Simmons were the only real batters on the Senator's outfit, that they drove in one-quarter of the team's runs, that they each broke the club record for home runs in one season . . . yet when these two men are allowed to escape to the 'minor' National League you cry to the heavens about that circuit depending on American League cast-offs.

"Now if Simmons and Bonura, on the strength of their 1938 season records, are qualified to become Senator cast-offs and waived out of the league, I would hate to try to locate a suitable description for some of the other American League performers.

"And as far as prejudice is concerned, it is my belief that with a little effort any sports writer could locate a number of National League discards who later were capable of performing in the American, instead of showing only the vice versa point of view."

What About Gelbert?

Whereupon my correspondent begins to name names, and inquires if it isn't a fact that Clark Griffith signed Charley Gelbert who was long ago released from the National League. And he asks if it is not, indeed, true, that Buck Newsom was found wanting by the Cubs and turns up as a star in the American League. And he adds that there is a gentleman named Carl Hubbell who was cast off by the Tigers years ago.

"Other National League cast-offs which come to mind at the moment and who later performed in the American League include such men as Rollie Hemsley, always promising in the National, but never starring until he entered the 'stronger' American; Dick Siebert, without a place with the Cardinals, but now the 'spark' of the Athletics; eccentric Babe Herman, unwanted by the Nationals, but used by the Tigers; Tony Piet, a shining light in the Pirates' infield, who spent several subsequent seasons with the White Sox and Tigers; Pat Malone, who was a great relief pitcher with the Yankees after he had trouble winning with the National League. And how about Lynn Nelson, the A's workhorse, who couldn't pitch acceptably in the National League as far back as the late 1920's?

"It may be downright blasphemy to voice comments such as these in a strictly American League city," Mr. Dobberstein concludes, "but I am convinced that for every argument in favor of the American League there is a counter argument for the Nationals. Now don't embarrass me by citing recent All Star games and World Series scores. Perhaps, as intimated by others before me, it is a case of the Yankees being superior to the rest of baseball rather than the American holding the upper hand over the National."

Very Truly Yours

My Dear Mr. Dobberstein: Possibly I did not make myself clear when I referred to the National League's habit of signing American League cast-offs in what I called a contrast to the American League's aversion to National discards.

It would be folly to deny that the American League does not take on aged and spavined old-timers from the National. At least not in any great number.

But look at the lost of former American leaguers signed by National League clubs in recent years. Heinie Manush was 38 when the Dodgers took him on. Carl Reynolds was 34 and Jack Russell 33 when the Cubs signed them for 1938. Tony Lazzeri was 33. Within the last month, Brooklyn signed a 38-year-old Luke Sewell and the Bees bought 35-year-old Al Simmons. The youngster in the National League crop of former American Leaguers is Zeke Bonura who will be 31 before another season dawns.

Sure, the American League has signed former National Leaguers. But Charley Gelbert and Pat Malone are the only two notable cases of American League clubs taking on comparatively aged players. Dick Siebert, the Cardinal cast-off, was only 24 when the A's signed him. Buck Newsom, of whom you speak, was only 26 when he came into the National League. Rollie Hemsley was only 26 and Tony Piet only 29.

Bonura and Simmons were, indeed, the heaviest hitters on the Washington club in point of runs produced. But they went out of the league tagged "not wanted" by American League clubs. Good enough for the National they may be, but the American apparently demands a higher standard.

Somebody in the American League was not very smart, of course, when he decided that Carl Hubbell would not do as a big leaguep itcher. But then again perhaps it is significant that the man who has been the National League's greatest pitcher for the last half-dozen years is an American League cast-off.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 2.—That little giant of the gridiron, David O'Brien, of All-America fame, uncorked his famous right arm today to pass the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian into a 15-to-7 triumph over Carnegie Tech's Tartans in the Sugar Bowl classic.

With the exception of one brief spell in the wildest game of the Sugar Bowl history, the Southwest Conference champions monopolized the fifth annual struggle as O'Brien, a 152-pound quarterbacking dynamo, directed the Nation's No. 1 eleven to a well-earned victory.

Ably supporting O'Brien's devastating aerial attack was a powerful display of ball carrying by Fullback Connie Sparks and Halfback Johnny Hall, behind what was probably the biggest and best line the Southwest had produced.

Frogs Trail at Half

O'Brien's support on the catching end by Don Looney, Earl Clark and Durward Horner stood out in the attack that saw the Frogs trailing at the half, 6-7, and on the short end of a score for the first time in 11 consecutive games, come back to win handily.

Leo R. (Dutch) Meyer, the Frog coach, was extremely happy and lost no time in praising Carnegie Tech, which stopped the long string of victories by Pittsburgh last fall.

Texas Christian, in addition to its pair of touchdowns and O'Briens field goal in the final period, drove into scoring territory on three other occasions only to be checked at the 12, 24 and 19 yard lines. Carnegie Tech, recovering a fumble, was on the 19 just before the half closed, but got no farther.

More than 50,000 spectators sat through a scoreless first period. Scoring fireworks got under way midway of the second frame.

The Frogs were the first to draw blood, driving 76 yards. The 200-pound Sparks slashed through center to score after O'Brien's tosses intermingled with tackle smashes had carried to the 1-yard stripe.

Tartans Get Touchdown

Carnegie Tech took the kickoff and Halfback Merlyn Condit ran it out to the 35. The Tartans went on to get their lone touchdown. The score came on a spectacular pass play, with Peter Moroz, like O'Brien, a featherweight ball player, standing midfield and connecting with a lazily floating, desperate toss to George Muha 50 seconds before the second period ended.

The Frogs lost no time in regaining the lead after the intermission. They drove 80 yards in five plays to cross the goal—O'Brien featuring the march with two beautiful passes.

Little Davey dropped a 35-yard toss into the arms of Clark and three plays later flung a bull's eye to Horner, a tall end, who snagged it at the Carnegie Tech 26-yard stripe and left everybody behind him.

Early in the fourth period, with O'Brien tossing right and left, the Frogs marched to Carnegie Tech's one-yard line, where on fourth down, O'Brien called for a field goal. Fullback Ward Wilkinson knelt at the nine to hold the ball and little Davey booted it through the bars.

Carnegie Tech uncorked a spirited drive midway the third period, featured by a 17-yard run by Condit who was pulled down on the T. C. U. 27 by O'Brien after it looked like he was away to score. The Tartans got one yard more when Muha went around on a reverse, but two passes failed and Condit's fourth down toss to Muha was intercepted by Ki Aldrich, All-America center who played a bang-up game all the way.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 2 (AP).—Tennessee's Volunteers crowned their flawless 1938 record with a bruising 17-0 victory over Oklahoma today before an overflow Orange Bowl crowd of 32,191 persons.

Led by a whirling dervish named George Cafego and a jackrabbit runner dubbed Babe Wood, Tennessee ripped through Oklahoma's vaunted defense for two touchdowns and Capt. Bowden Wyatt kicked a field goal as the Sooners failed in the last minute to complete their only serious scoring threat.

It was a rough-and-tumble duel, interspersed with frequent penalties and fumbles. The out-weighed Vols showed they could more than take it in that kind of warfare.

Capitalizes on Fumble

They pounced on a break to move 27 yards in the first quarter, Bob Foxx scooting through the line from eight yards out, capitalized on a fumble to get the field goal in the second period and then proved they could start from scratch. Wood personally conducted a 73-yard touchdown sortie, scoring from the 19-yard line on an end run behind magnificent blocking.

Only in the final minutes did Oklahoma get under way. Bowled over by crushing blocks, the Sooners finally put their passing attack in high gear and moved up next to Tennessee goal. There the aerial attack failed.

For awhile in the last period it appeared the game might end in open hostilities. Gilford Duggan, Oklahoma's All-Big-Six tackle, was ejected for taking a poke at Ed Molinski, Tennessee guard. Later Molinski was banished for slugging.

Opportunist Team

Tennessee lived up to its reputation as an opportunist team.

Oklahoma was pushed back by a 15-yard penalty and Hugh McCullough, the Sooner big gun, punted out to Cafego who ran 16 yards to the Oklahoma 27.

Five plays later the Vols had a touchdown, Fullback Leonard Coffman made 12 yards in three bucks and Cafego crashed tackle for 12 more. Foxx faked a spin and rambled through a hole wide enough for Fred B. Snite, jr.'s iron lung trailer, which was at the other end of the field. Wyatt nonchalantly converted.

Later in the opening quarter

Billy Patterson, Jim Coughlan Form Star Passing Team to Rout Easterners; West Completely Outplays Foes Before 60,000

By Russell J. Newland.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

San Francisco, Jan. 2.—Two great players—one from Stamford and one from Baylor—and two remarkable passes combined today to give the West a 14-to-0 upset victory over the East in the annual football classic played for charity.

Some 60,000 fans jamming Kezar Stadium to capacity, sat under leaden skies and intermittent drizzles of rain throughout one of the most thrilling games in the 14 years' history of the series.

A halfback from Texas, Billy Patterson, of Baylor University, and a home bred of the Golden State, a Jim Coughlan, of Santa Clara, led the Western Collegians to the most one-sided triumph since 1936.

Coming in at left half in the second period, Patterson whipped the ball to Coughlan, substituting at right end, and the latter ran 10 yards to score.

The same combination came back in the last quarter to repeat the pitching-catching maneuver, this time Coughlan snagging the ball over the goal line.

Conversions Perfect

Each time the try for point was converted, Prescott Hutchins, punching guard from Oregon State College, place-kicking the first, and Charles Heilman, Iowa State, end, booting it through on the second attempt.

The game opened with the East numbering three All-Americans and other near greats from the other side of the Mississippi, as the 10-to-8 favorite.

But the odds proved false as the encounter wore on, the West, unawed by the array of brilliant talent coached by Andy Kerr and Bernie Bierman, outcharged and outtricked its rival almost throughout the contest. Except for two rallies, one in the opening period and the other in the last quarter, the East failed to threaten.

The West, on the other hand, aside from scoring twice, made three goalward marches in the second period and missed two field-goal tries, both in the last quarter.

Although some of the finest players in the land participated in the benefit contest for the Shriners' Crippled Children's Hospital, the crowd turned out expecting to see a duel for individual backfield honors between Marshall Goldberg, Pittsburgh's All-American, and Vic Bottari, California flash who ranked with the best in the West this year.

The two were marked men from the start. In the circumstances they turned in excellent games. Bottari turned in the slightly superior brand of play, gaining 35 yards on nine attempts. Goldberg packed the oval ten times for a total of 23 yards.

They were overshadowed by teammates, however. For the East it was John Pingel, Michigan State star, who placed Goldberg at left half, and Howard Weiss, plunging fullback from Wisconsin.

Western laurels were claimed by the wily Texan, Patterson, with his accurate passes, and Bill Paulman, Stanford fullback, who carried the ball 11 times to gain 48 yards through the big Eastern line.

West Scores in Second

The West began setting the stage for its first touchdown late in the first quarter. A punt return of 22 yards by Bottari put the ball on the Western 47-yard line. Bottari gained 3 yards, and Right Halfback Jimmy Johnston, of Washington, picked up 1 more. Fullback Paulman tossed a pass to Bottari good for 10 yards as the period ended.

Patterson replaced Bottari as the team's changed sides and Coughlan came into the game at one of

Northern College All-Stars Victors Before 8,000

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 2 (AP).—The South ran into another Gettysburg today as Northern college all-stars won a hard-fought, 7-to-0 victory over a similar Dixie team in a contest billed as a gridiron renewal of Blue and Gray rivalry.

Held within a stone's throw of the Alabama capital where the Confederacy was bron almost 78 years ago, the game, again like Gettysburg, was full of "might have beens."

Approximately 8,000 saw the contest.

Tony Ippolito, powerful fullback from Purdue, rammed the Gray line in the second period and went 2 yards for the only touchdown, after he and Mike Kabelo, from Ohio State, had engineered a march of 83 yards. Alex Shoebaum, also of Ohio State, added the extra point.

The South had several opportunities, but none materialized into points. Once Eddie Dunn, of Miami, Fla., broke into the open after a burst through the invaders' line, but Nabelo nailed him. Again, Gaylon Smith, of Southwestern (Memphis) stiff-armed his wal to the safety man, only to be pulled down hard from behind.

Texas Tech Bows, 20-13, To St. Mary's

Gael Power Is Too Much for Texans; Late Passes Net Two Texas Scores

By the United Press.

Cotton Bowl, Dallas, Tex., Jan. 2. St. Mary's Galloping Gaels galloped over and around Texas Tech's Red Raiders today and won the third annual Cotton Bowl football game, 20 to 13.

For three periods the superior power of the Gaels kept them in control of the game and enabled them to score their touchdowns. When the Raiders took to the air in the fourth quarter the 36,000 fans came out of their seats. A series of passes gave the Texans two touchdowns, then they barely missed another.

For 45 minutes the game looked easy for Slip Madigan's Gaels from California, but when Gene Barnett started heaving his long passes, the complexion changed.

"Hellzappopin" Scores

The game was only four minutes gone when Eddie Hefferman scored St. Mary's first touchdown. "Hellzapoppin" is Heffernan's nickname, and the Red Raiders found it was a good one.

The Gaels got their chance when Ralph Jack intercepted a Texas Tech pass giving St. Mary's the ball on Tech's 37-yard line.

The Gaels hit the line twice for 6 yards. Then Mike Perrie got away for a 15-yard gain. Lou Rimassa was held for no gain on the next play, but on the following play Heffernan shot around right end and over the goal line. Perrie converted.

Mike Klotovich, the spark plug of the Gaels second team—which is misnamed, since it has outscored the starters all season—made the second touchdown in the second period.

St. Mary's opened the period with the ball on Tech's 18-yard line. The

Utah Routs New Mexico, 26-0, In One-Sided Sun Bowl Game

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 2.—Utah's football jaggernaut rolled over the University of New Mexico, 26 to 0, in today's Sun Bowl gridiron classic before a capacity crowd of 13,500.

Heralded in pregame forecasts at no better than even-money choices, Ike Armstrong's white-shirted warriors took the unaccustomed heat in stride and kept New Mexico's Lobos on their heels for most of the game.

Utah showed its power quickly when it climaxed a 58-yard drive midway of the first quarter with a touchdown by Tom Pace, who skirted his right end on a lateral from Ray Davis.

With one minute of play remaining in the period, Ray Peterson, flashy Ute back, intercepted Finlay MacGillivray's aerial on Utah's 40-yard line and raced to a second score. Capt. Barney McGarry kicked both extra points.

The rambling Utes, with Peterson and Gene Cooper leading the attack, galloped to another score in the second quarter, as Peterson plunged over from the 6-inch line on fourth down. Leonard McGarry missed the conversion.

New Mexico's only scoring threat in the first half bogged down midway in the opening period, when MacGillivray fumbled a pass on Utah's 42-yard line and the Utes took over.

Fred Gehrke, Utah halfback, took

tra point but few saw it. The gallant Dukes from North Carolina took the kickoff and tried desperately to win the game they thought they had won a minute before. Tipton was tossed for a 12-yard loss. He came back to pass the Dukes toward midfield, but the gun sounded.

Wade's First Bowl Loss

The game was ended, and the Dukes stared into their first defeat, the first score tallied against them, and a long, weary train ride back to Durham.

The Iron Dukes were stubborn, and as strong as their past feats foretold, but they went the way of other great undefeated teams—Notre Dame and California—before the slashing, spectacular, never-give-up Trojans.

It was a brilliant victory for Howard Jones, and a sad defeat for Wallace Wade, of Duke. Wade had never been licked in the Rose Bowl, although one of his three Alabama teams had been tied, but this Blue Devil aggregation, outdowned 13 to 8, outrushed 135 yards to 86 and outpassed 84 yards to 53, was up against an unbeatable team today.

Tipton's Punting Brilliant

Duke in the first half failed to capitalize on a pair of blocked Trojan punts. Aside from Tipton, it hardly presented an offense worthy of the name, but its defensive strength and Tipton's spectacular punts kept the Trojans hemmed up in their own back yard.

The murky skies shed a sprinkle of rain intermittently until late in the game, and then the sun peeped through.

The Dukes' lone score was started in midfield. Tipton made 1 yard and passed 13 yards down the sidelines to McAfee. Robbie Robinson made 5 to reach the 20 and Tipton made 2. O'Mara, big Duke fullback, crashed over tackle for 3, and on fourth down Ruffa booted his field goal.

Summary of the play:

FIRST QUARTER:

Duke won the toss and took the north goal with Harry Smith booting the ball. Bob Spangler ran the ball back from his 7 to the 28. Eric Tipton, after losing 6 on one play, punted to Granny Lansdell and he ran the ball up field 13 to his 43.

Troy made it a first down in midfield on a pass and end run, but Tipton intercepted Lansdell's long pass on his 9. Tipton punted right back to the Trojan 40. Southern California could not get its offense clicking this time, and Lansdell punted out on Duke's 30.

Bob O'Mara and Tipton punched the ball to the 37 before Tipton kicked to the Trojan 25. Lansdell returned the ball 5. A pass over center, Lansdell to Bob Winslow and another flat throw to Bill Sangster took the ball to the S. C. 48.

A spitting drizzle began. Lansdell and Sangster punched their way to the Duke 46. Another throw to Bob Hoffman took the ball to the 37, but Lansdell had to kick and the ball went over the goal line.

Tipton promptly booted the ball back to the Trojan 31. A quick kick and a clipping penalty gave Duke possession again on its 25. A 15-yard penalty against Troy gave Duke a first down on its 46. Tipton took the ball to midfield around left end.

Tipton booted the ball out on the Trojan 10 from there. Landell broke through and raced 25 yards before he was stopped. He had to punt and Spangler made a 10-yard return to his 36. Tipton punted to the 18 and Lansdell ran left end for 21. The first period ended scoreless with S. C. on its 35.

George McAfee returned Mickey Anderson's punt 7 to his 36 as the second quarter opened. Tipton punted to the Trojan 37 and in two sweeps, Anderson ran to midfield. He smashed to the Duke 42 but had to punt. Bailey blocked the kick and Duke took over on the Blue Devils' 45.

Once more Tipton kicked after two plays failed, and Troy swung into action on its 25. The drizzle had stopped. Jack Banta punched the ball to the Trojan 40 but Anderson's quick kick was short, going out of bounds on the Duke 40.

With a clear field in front, Spangler dropped Tipton's pass. So Tipton and O'Mara punched their way to midfield and a first down. But the Blue Devils couldn't go further and Tipton kicked over the goal line.

Perdue blocked Day's quick kick but it was third down and Day recovered on his 10. He punted to Spangler on the next play and he raced 14 yards to the Trojan 38. Jones intercepted Tipton's pass and ran it back 18 yards to his 29.

Southern California had to kick from there and Duke swung into action on its 35. On two fake passes, Tipton ran to the Trojan 48-yard line. Someone in the Duke rooting section gave the rebel yell and wildly waved a pair of feminine silk panties. Duke lost the ball on downs on the Trojan 35 with ten seconds to play. The half ended scoreless as S. C. passes failed.

THIRD:

The sun was shining, but it was spitting rain again as the third period opened. The Trojan kick-off went only to the 24 and Bailey ran it back to the 34. Tipton punted to the Trojan 28. Lansdell broke away for ten on the first play. But Lansdell was forced to kick and the Blue Devils took over on their 22.

They exchanged kicks with Duke getting possession this time on the 20 as the ball went over the goal line. Tipton slipped on the wet turf on his 10-yard line. He punted out to the Trojan 36 and Lansdell returned the ball to the Duke 49.

A half arc rainbow appeared in the southeast as the drizzle continued. Troy moved to the Duke 44 before Lansdell had to kick. Duke took over on its 31 as the kick went almost straight up. Again, Spangler was in the open, only to drop Tipton's long pass. Tony Tonelli blocked Tipton's kick but it was third down and Duke recovered on the 20.

He got the next one away to the Trojan 42 with Sangster returning to the Duke 48. Lansdell broke loose to the 36, the deepest into Duke territory today. But Don Hill intercepted Lansdell's pass and ran the sidelines 25 yards to Troy's 45 to turn the tide. Don McNeil, of Troy, intercepted Tipton's pass on his 35.

The Trojans had to kick and George McAfee ran the ball back 15 to midfield. George McAfee caught Tipton's 24-yard pass on the Trojan's 25. It was the first time Troy's goal was in danger. Roger Robinson smashed the line for 5. The ball was on the 18-yard line as the third period ended scoreless.

FOURTH:

O'Mara punched the ball to the 16 and Tony Ruffa kicked a field goal from the 24-to put the Blue Devils in front, 3 to 0. The ball was high and square between the uprights.

Troy had to kick and Day's towering punt went over the goal line. Tipton promptly kicked back to Troy's 41. Day kicked another long one, and Spangler tried to field the ball on his 9. He fumbled and Phil Gaspar recovered, giving the Trojans the ball there.

Lansdell lost 5 and Bob People's pass was incomplete. Lansdell hit right tackle for 5. Troy lost 5 yards for taking too much time in putting the ball in play. Phil Gaspar's attempted field goal from the 20 was wide and Duke took over on its 20.

Some of the spectators started to leave after Troy missed its scoring chance with six minutes to play. Tipton punted out and the Trojans on power boomed their way to the Duke 35. Doyle Nave, Troy's passer supreme, went in.

He completed a pass to Krueger on the 25 and then again on the 16. He completed a third straight but lost 2 yards. There was a minute to play. Krueger caught another over the goal line for a touchdown. Gaspar kicked goal for a 7 to 3 lead and probable victory.

Duke was unable to get anywhere in the remaining seconds and was deep in its own territory when the final gun barked. Final score, Duke, 3; Southern California, 7.

At the Post

Tropical Park, Jan. 2.

Dear Al—It seems the desperate touts are at it again and officials of this track are putting police and detectives on their trail. It has been reported that these sharpsters are sending out fake wires in the names of prominent jockeys and horsemen soliciting bets. Voicing indignation of this attempted fraud, Samuel C. Nuckols, Tropical steward, said: "Persons receiving such wires and letters are requested to contact the Tropical Park stewards or the Florida Racing Commission and the offenders, if caught, will be prosecuted under Florida law." Rushaway, the star gelding owned by A. G. Tarn, turned in a sizzling workout this morning and may be heard from in the near future. He stepped 5 furlongs in 1:00 4-5. The 6-year-old gelding has been out of the money in two recent starts. The fact that morning racing proved successful here today may give some of the other tracks an idea. A morning program at Bowie on Thanksgiving Day, giving the fans a chance to get home early to dinner or attend a football game in the afternoon might draw surprisingly well. However, Old Mother Bowie hasn't done anything original, except call off several days of the sport, since she first offered racing, so I guess that's out. Oriental Park, over at Havana, will use the Jones camera which made the decisions at Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Bowie last fall. Jockeys are fairly well paid young men, but some of them never get above the ordinary earnings for their trade. However, every once and a while a good colt comes along and a veteran rider is assigned to him. The pair knock off several stakes and the boy gets into the big dough. George Seabo had that pleasant experience last year. He was earning ordinary money when along came the Brann Stable's Challedon. Seabo rode him so well in his first victory that Trainer Lou Schaffer made him the regular rider and Seabo went on into the heavy sugar. George is now riding here. He has had a couple of mounts and doubtless will get into winning form soon. Challedon has given Seabo a new lease on riding life. I must have packed a lot of sleepy horses, because I had only one winner on the morning card. BILL.

First Race—Dead Ready has been knocking at the door hereabouts and appears due for big things in the opening sprint. Gets in well with 109 pounds. Little Tarzan has plenty of speed and is sure to get a piece of the dough. Izaak Walton to take care of the others.

Second Race—Green Melon turned in an improved effort last out and appears ready to take down a purse in a field of this sort. I'm going to string along. Maneuver is a fair sort and fits well in this company. Irene's Bob is far down the list and is a doubtful starter, but would be in the thick of contention if in action.

Third Race—Ladfield turned back a good field last out in a form reversal that almost made the stewards blush. This one has class and needs only to race back to that recent performance. Muggins, a winner here, is dangerous. Brain Trust for the minor award.

Fourth Race—Billabong and Rugged Red will battle it out for the main money here, I do believe, and I'm going to take them in the order listed. Post Office, in with a feather assignment, is a possible surprise.

Fifth Race—Pit Terrier likes the sprint route and appears capable of holding these safe at 6 furlongs. Repeller, a recent winner in a blanket photo finish, won a short race, but prefers a distance. Should be close up, however. Nice Goin for the show end.

Sixth Race—Quicker is a fast one, out of the gate and may take an early lead in this and forget to stop. I'm going to take my chances. Harry's Dream and Rocky Meadow seem to have something on the others. Odd Blue, despite poor recent races, has a little class and could awake with a bang.

Seventh Race—Continuity gets in this with 108 pounds and the mare was never better. She loves the track and may get home in front. Earl Porter's last was a good effort. Findon to take care of the others.

Eighth Race—Knee Action deserves the call in the day's finale. This one has worked briskly and seems ideally placed. Never Cease and Trigane for the place and show. Best bet—Ladfield.

Mayer Ace Well Ahead Of Ligaroti

Sweepalot Is Third; Sprint Handicap Goes to Capt. Cal, Clocked in 1:10 1-5

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 2.—Film Producer Louis B. Mayer's Main Man proved the dark horse in the New Year's $10,000 added handicap at Santa Anita track today, winning by two and one-fourth lengths over Ligaroti, which was second, with Sweepalot a close third.

A holiday crowd of 45,000 persons braved threatening weather to see Main Man take the lead, after a troublesome start, and hold it to the finish, covering the mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 2-5. A drizzle fell at times, but the track was fast.

The victory was worth $8,350 to Mayer. Main Man paid $24.20, $8.60 and $5.20 on $2 win, place and show parimutuel tickets. Ligaroti paid $4.20 to place, $3.60 to show, and Sweepalot $7.80.

At the break Sweepalot and Indian Broom went forwardly placed behind Main Man. Ligaroti moved into third place at the turn. Heelfly, which caused most of the trouble at the start, began to come through on the rail and the field bunched for the finish.

Main Man, ahead two lengths, held on gamely as Ligaroti and Sweepalot tried vainly to cut down the lead. Other finishers, in order, were Heelfly, Specify, Gosum and Indian Broom.

Captain Cal came within 2-5 of a second of Leading Article's new track record for the three-fourth mile in winning the Rose Bowl Handicap at 1:10 1-5. Many Stings was second and Speed to Spare, third.

Capt. Cal, slow to get going, was badly outrun for half the distance, then Jockey John Adams brought him ahead in the middle of the track to catch Many Stings near the finish and win narrowly. Speed to Spare gave all he had in the early part of the race.

The purse was $1,500. Capt. Cal, owned by A. M. Koewler, paid $8.20, $4.20 and $2.60 across the board. Many Stings was worth $20.80 to place and $4.80 to show, with Speed to Spare paying $2.40.

Dempsey to Referee

Hagerstown, Jan. 2.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, will referee a boxing show to be staged here at the State armory January 11.

SPITTENIMAGE, away forwardly, forced a steady pace and raced HIGH TREASON into submission the opening 3 furlongs. He drew out on the stretch turn, but was kept under energetic pressure to maintain his advantage. SUN MADRAS, well up all the way, came to the outside entering the stretch, made a game effort, but could not reach the winner. MISS DE MIE gradually bettered her position and shook off HIGH TREASON in the final furlong.

LIGHTNING LADY, prominent contender throughout, was forced wide on the stretch turn, but finished with determination and outlasted GOLD DART in the final drive. GOLD DART, slow to get going, gradually bettered her position, weaving between the leaders, and just failed to get up. HOLIDAY TEA, keen contender the entire trip, closed with good courage under punishment and outstayed NIKKI B. The latter outbroke the field, displayed the most speed, but then faltered through the stretch. CHICKHARRA moved up stoutly rounding the turn on the outside. She lost ground coming into the stretch and faltered the last furlong.

BUTTER, off tardily, worked her way forwardly on the outside the last half mile and, closing gamely, wore DISTRACT down in the final drive. DISTRACT, under vigorous pressure to maintain his position in the early running, came to the outside entering the stretch, took a brief lead, but could not stave off the winner's challenge. FLYING VICTORY began fast, showed excellent speed while saving ground, but then faltered when the real test came. SPRING MOON, well up all the way, retired in the stretch run.

CELESTINO, hustled to the front, set a steady pace while racing on the outside of the leader and, responding courageously when placed to a drive, outlasted his opponents through the stretch. SKAGERRAK gradually improved his position on the outside after leaving the backstretch. He made a game bid, but then hung slightly the last sixteenth mile. SCOTCH HIGH, keen contender all the way, was sandwiched between the leaders after entering the stretch. He faltred right at the end. CAUGHT, well ridden and saving considerable ground entering the stretch, was unable to overhaul the leaders.

COURT SCANDAL outbroke the field, but was taken back off the pace rounding the first turn. He began to move up after leaving the backstretch on the inside, came around the leaders turning into the stretch and, closing gamely, wore HISTRIONIC down 60 yards out, to win going away. HISTRIONIC stumbled when the start came. He bettered his position gradually in the opening half mile, displayed of HUNTING HOME in the stretch turn, but then faltered from his early effort when challenged. HUNTING HOME broke alertly, went prominent while saving the most ground, but faltered slightly in the final drive. MIDAS had no excuses.

COUNT MAURICE, going well up under light restraint until straightened out into the stretch, closed with a rush on the outside of the leaders and wore SUN VICTOR down in the final stride. SUN VICTOR, on the outside, forced a steady early pace and raced DULCIMER into defeat. He assumed command in the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. THE STORY rated off the pace the early stages, responded gamely when placed to a drive the final furlong and was wearing the leaders down. DULCIMER held the field safe for speed, but faltered in the final drive.

HI TIDE, eased off the pace after obtaining a position rounding the first turn, moved up with determination while circling the field on the stretch turn and drew out in the final furlong. GRACE GRIER, never far from the leader, responded gamely when challenged, but was not equal to the winner. SUNSET GIRL, rushed to the front and saving ground all the way, faltered in the final drive. FLAG SONG closed resolutely under strong pressure. CRINOLINE, vigorously ridden, was unable to better her position.

KINDRED SPIRIT, under restraint in the early stages, moved up willingly on the outside of the leaders leaving the far turn, continued stoutly in the final drive and was up in time to nip EXHORT. The latter, on the inside and in tight quarters, secured racing room in the stretch and barely missed. BAYDROP, which set the pace most of the way, held on with determination, but could not cope with the bids of the top two. MYSTIC SIGN ran a good race.

Return of Ripley Makes G. U. Five Conference Threat

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

VIDMER

New York, Jan. 2.—Maybe the U. S. L. T. A. isn't such a bad influence in the lives of some of our young men as it once appeared to be. There was a time, not so long ago, when there were several claims that the ruling tennis body in this country was doing quite a job of turning out a species that was known as tennis bums. But influence seems to have changed.

Ten or 12 years ago the officials of the U. S. L. T. A. were so eager to promote the popularity of the game, which meant attracting large galleries to all the tournaments from Miami to Maine and across the Mississippi, that most of the leading players were persuaded to go on from season to season and resort to resort, playing a great deal of tennis but doing practically nothing else.

This was not a difficult thing to do, as the young men liked nothing better than to play tennis, especially as they were entertained in the best homes, treated royally wherever they went and, through the liberal expense accounts allowed them, even could put away a few dollars to tide them over the month or so during the winter when there were no invitations floating around loose.

Comfortable Living

It was a very comfortable way of living, but a few of the smarter players began to realize that there wasn't much future in it. When they reached the advanced age of 30 or so, their tennis fell off and the invitations decreased proportionately.

Somehow they weren't quite as welcome in the homes of Newport, Palm Beach and White Sulphur as they had been formerly. And they awoke to the dull realization that they had wasted the years of their lives when they should have been establishing themselves in a more permanent line of business.

I think it was Vinnie Richards who first woke up to what was happening around him, and what was going to be his own lot if he kept on letting the U. S. L. T. A. direct his life—up to a certain point. And the astute Mr. Richards determined to break away.

He turned professional in 1926 and there were many badge wearers who shook their heads and said he was making a grave mistake. There also were a lot of doors closed in his face, for a tennis professional had no social standing.

Shunned as Pro

Just why this should be, I never have been able to figure out. After all, if Vinnie was nice enough to entertain in your home in September, when he was playing in the national championships at Forest Hills, he certainly was nice enough to entertain in your home in October. But by turning professional, he suddenly lost caste in the eyes of the U. S. L. T. A. and also in the eyes of their followers.

However, Richards started a movement that took quite a few young men into the professional ranks; The insey brothers, Bill Tilden, Lester Stoeffen and, more recently, Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry.

Tomorrow night Donald Budge joins the parade. He will meet Vines at Madison Square Garden in the first of seventy matches which will be played across the country during the next few months. But at the end of that time Budge will have earned $75,000.

The red-headed lad who last year won the national championships of Australia, France, England and the United States, besides helping to defend the Davis Cup, is only 33 years old. So it would seem that the tennis boys are getting smarter a little sooner than they used to. And that's where the influence of the U. S. L. T. A. has undergone a change.

When the U. S. L. T. A. can create the opportunity for the son of a California laundryman to make $75,000 in the course of a few months when he is only 23 years old, then it can't be such a bad influence after all.

Sponsored Budge

That the U. S. L. T. A. is rewhich Budge has, goes without argument. t it hadn't been for that body of officials, Budge would have had to go to work long ago, and having work to do he wouldn't have had the time nor the means to develop his tennis to such a point of perfection that he can ask and receive $75,000 for a series of matches.

They have been responsible for turning out a very fine young man, with poise, becoming modesty, a sense of sportsmanship and a means of making a lot of money. There's nothing in that to be ashamed of.

But just because Budge has decided to take the opportunity to capitalize on what the U. S. L. T. A. has created, I see no reason why he should be counted an outcast where the amateur tennis players and the people who follow them gather.

Only a couple of years ago Fred Perry was the darling of London. He was helping England to win and defend the Davis Cup. And only a couple of years before that, Ellsworth Vines was being sought by the proud matrons of Newport. He was winning championships. And now that they have turned professional and are earning their way instead of accepting the hospitality of their patrons, it seems to me that there's no reason for considering them not acceptable as opponents for the amateurs of today.

In other words, I can't understand why the U. S. L. T. A. still maintains an uncompromising attitude toward an open championship tournament. After all, the professionals of today, for the most part, were practically raised by the U. S. L. T. A. The leading lights were the amateurs of only yesterday.

Coach Seen Steadying Influence

Builds Club Around Schmidt, Adapted To Style of Play; 5 Lettermen Ready

(This is one of a series of stories by the Associated Press on prospects of teams in the Eastern Collegiate Basketball Conference.)

Georgetown's hopes for success in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball Conference are based this year on no single player, but on its new coach, Elfer Ripley, who has come back to the Capital from Yale.

Popular with students and players, Elmer already has been a steadying influence on the team that last year was such an in-and-out aggregation. Among a big 15-man squad, Ripley has five of the previous season's lettermen, the bright lights of which are Capt. Joe Murphy and Forward Ed Kurtyka.

From last year's freshman team he has inherited big Johnny McGowan, a 190-pound, 6-foot, 2-inch fellow, whose floor generalship won him the captaincy of the yearlings. McGowan, a fine defensive player and the owner of a cool competitive head, is counted on to supply a certain amount of steadiness. Last year the Hoyas habitually went to pieces when they got behind.

Schmidt Good Man

For his type of play, Coach Ripley has a good man in Johnny Schmitt, an exceptional dribbler and the fastest player on the squad. At forward last year, Capt. Joe Murphy was the team's high scorer with 121 points. This year he has been shifted to guard, where his 6 feet 4 inches will be of more help.

The Hoyas scored plenty of points last season, 643, but they didn't help much because opponents totaled 685. Georgetown won 7 and lost 10. In six of their defeats they got ahead but exploded in the midst of enemy rallies.

The other forward, Ed Kurtyka, is a senior and the best shot on the squad. His forte is getting the ball off the backboard, and he is aggressive and smart. Irving Rizzi, a sophomore, is a starter at guard. He led last year's undefeated freshman team in scoring. Big hands make him an accomplished ball handler.

From Georgetown's undefeated, untied football team Ripley has big Frank Daly and Joe McFadden. Daly weighs 195, is fast and tall and plays either forward or guard. McFadden, quarterback of the grid team, is a good forward.

Two Regulars Lost

The Hoyas lost two regulars by graduation, Mike Petroskey and Harry Bassin. Both will play professional baseball.

Georgetown's first conference game is with Temple on January 9. Already they have defeated Western Maryland, Loyola (Baltimore) and American in warm-up contests.

In the Loyola game the Hoyas showed symptoms of relapsing into their last year's ailment. Far ahead at half-time, they let the young, inexperienced Baltimore boys rally and come within a basket of tying the score. Georgetown finally won 36-34 as Ripley nearly swooned.

East

the flank positions, the ball was on the east's 39-yard line. On the first play, Patterson shot one to the far corner, Coughlan snared it on the 10-yard line and dashed over.

From then until the half ended, the west threatened to score three times and each time lost the ball on an intercepted pass. One march was good for 66 yards to the 5 but ending on the 12; another netted 47 yards to the east's 10 and the third approach to the goal saw Al Braga, of San Francisco, Pingel's pass was intercepted 22 yards from scoring turf.

Each side intercepted the ball three times during the period and Patterson completed five tosses in sensational fashion.

In the last few minutes of the third period, the west put on the outstanding line-smashing display of the game. Paulman and Bottari alternated carrying the ball, the former packing four times for 29 yards and Bottari picking up 19 yards in the same number of plunges. As the period ended, Paulman passed to Bottari for 5 yards putting the ball in the East's 21. The two players accounted for 53 yards between them.

Navy's Five In Workout

Annapolis, Jan. 2.—With only five practice periods to prepare for the opening game of basketball against Gettysburg College here Saturday, the Navy squad, under Head Coach John Wilson and his assistants, returned early from their holiday leave and worked out in Dahlgren Hall this afternoon.

Wilson named four of his probable starters, while one guard position is still open. Against the Bullets, George Ghesquiere is likely to jump center, with Bob Gillette and Larry Geis at the forwards and Capt. Bob Laney at guard. Mike Hanley or Walter Shaffer may fill the other places.

Ghesquiere and Laney were regular starters last season, while Gillette and Geis got in a lot of match playing. Gillette and Hanley are from the District, the former having played with Devitt and the latter with Western High.

charge of the fireworks in the final quarter as a climax to a Ute 61-yard rampage. He piled over for the touchdown from the 10 after putting the ball in scoring position with a 15-yard run and a lateral.

Utah's great line, led by Capt. McGarry, halted New Mexico's famed open offense in its tracks. Wily Coach Armstrong was prepared for New Mexico spread plays, and tossed a monkey wrench into man line and wide-flung secondary Ted Shipkey's works with a five-defense. Utah's superior reserve strength plyaed an important part in the victory.

New Mexico was outclassed from the opening gun. The Utes rolled up 16 first downs to 12, gained 379 yards from scrimmage to 179, and intercepted four Lobo passes. The Lobo pass attack failed to click for the only time this season.

Occasional Bowler Rolls 184, Saves Day for Brother Haight

Strike, Strike, Strike the Pins Are Striking Or a Phone Call in Time Saves Nine

By Walter Haight.

Having tired of making a paper-clip chain, I was practicing picking up pennies with the hole in my shoe and getting pretty fair at it, too, if I must say it myself.

"Haven't I seen you somewhere?" asked a familiar voice. It was the boss.

"Yes sir, you have seen me before," I replied. "Remember me? I'm the stout fellow you sent to the race track last September to pick the winner. Well, I finally picked one closing day at Charles Town, so I have returned."

His eyes made a nonstop flight around my waist and he said, "Haight, I want some stories out of you and if you can't get close enough to a typewriter to use the keyboard, write them in long hand." I didn't get all the words in his closing sentence, but it ended with "—— as broad as it is long." I was in no shape to argue.

He didn't see me, but I waggled three of my four chins at him and he would have gotten all four if the phone had not rung. And let me say here and now that when you have a hangover hanging on a hanger and the phone rings—well, it rang.

"Do you know anything about duckpins?" came a voice over the wire.

Having knocked down 99 pins and having wobbled another at the old Casino on Fourteenth street in 1812 and having set up those splinter-banded ducks at the Chevy Chase Lake alleys before I graduated to "walking the dog" on the nearby dancing pavilion, I admitted that I was not altogether uninitiated.

"Well, a friend of mine just rolled 184 over at Convention Hall and I was wondering if that wasn't the best score of the season," explained the voice.

One word led to another and the conglomaration led to my solving the story problem, at least until the boss sees this.

Yesterday afternoon, Gilbert Tolstoi and Bernard Orlans, employed by the Morton Clothing Store (plug), had a little time to kill so they agreed on a game of duckpins. Now Brother Tolstoi had bowled only about 15 games in his life and in turf parlance, he hadn't been to the post for more than a year. When he took off his coat and unbuttoned his vest Brother Tolstoi looked the part of "The pinboy's delight" as we used to call the guttermen.

Brother Tolstoi rolled an "eight," the hard way, in the first box, sliding a pin across the alley to barely escape a "five." His next box produced an encouraging "nine" and when his third try brought a "10" Brother Tolstoi had visions of rolling an 85 flat game. Brother Orlans, in the meantime, was giving his friend a run for the money at this stage.

Then things began to happen to Brother Tolstoi's score. He knocked off five marks in a row. Strike, spare, strike, strike, strike, strike—sounds like the start of a revolution but his score mounted thusly—57, 67, 127, 157 and 175 with another box to go. Brother Tolstoi missed a spare in the last box and took a nine for a total of 184.

When you consider that thousands of games have been rolled at Convention Hall this season with the best in the game propelling the balls, Brother Tolstoi's effort was the baseball of equivalent of a pitcher turning in a no-hit game on the day he reports at camp or Arch McDonald, with his bowed tendon, making a hole-in-one.

Californians were held for three plays, but on fourth down Klotovich scampered around right end for a 14-yard gain. Harry Aronson hit the line, then Klotovich shot for the right end of the field again, and picked up the necessary yards for a touchdown. Andy Marefos converted.

An intercepted pass gave St. Mary's its final touchdown in the third period. Herbert Hoover Smith intercepted a pass thrown by Bobby Holmes, shot to the right side of the field and rode the sidelines 25 yards for a counter. Peerie's kick was wild.

Then, with the count 20-to-0 against them, the Red Raiders turned loose their aerial artillery with the start of the final period. Just five plays were needed for a touchdown.

Passes Out of Danger

As the quarter started, Tech was on its own 23-yard line, but on the first play Barnett threw a long pass to George Webb that moved the ball to the 50-yard line. Another pass from Barnett to Dudley Akin made eight more yards. After Jodie Marek failed to gain through the line, Barnett hit the line for 8 yards, and climaxed the drive by shooting a pass to Elmer Tarbox, who raced down the sideline 34 yards to a touchdown. Marek kicked goal and Tech was under way.

Five minutes later Barnett threw another pass, but this time E. J. McKnight, waiting for it 2 yards past the goal, snagged the 32-yard heave and dropped to the ground. Marek again tried the kick, but for the second time in his college career he failed to make the extra point.

One other Tech drive by the aerial route barely missed ending in a touchdown. George Webb, taking a pass from Barnett, raced 60 yards and had a clear field ahead but made the mistake of looking back. Nick Klotovich leaped and dropped Webb when he slowed down for his backward glance.

Virginia State Teams Have Ten Contests on Card; Maroons Are Active

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 2.—Virginia College basketball teams will return to the courts this week in ten contests.

Roanoke's State titleholders will be the busiest with three tilts scheduled. The Maroons entertain Concord College on Tuesday and Lynchburg on Thursday at Salem and then go into Roanoke City to meet George Washington on Saturday.

Another game tomorrow will send the strong Emory and Henry squad against Tennessee at Knoxville.

The Old Dominion squads were especially active before Christmas. Roanoke whipped LaSalle, Lynchburg and Marshall but lost to Villanova, 35 to 29. Washington and Lee's Generals downed Bridgewater, National Business College, Louisville and Xavier but dropped a 67 to 47 high-scoring test at Kentucky.

William and Mary's sophomores in three Southern Conference games beat North Carolina State but bowed to Davidson and Wake Forest. Richmond broke even in conference games, trouncing Maryland and losing to the Citadel, and ended the December campaigning with another loss to Pittsburgh.

Randolph-Macon toppled the Norfolk Naval Base team but was defeated by Wake Forest and Davidson. Hampden-Sydney's promising outfit won over the Petersburg "Y." Medical College and St. John's, losing to Davidson by a single point.

Lynchburg came after the Roanoke defeat to whip Concord. Virginia won easily over Bridgewater in the Cavalier's only college game.

Tuesday
Emory and Henry at Tennessee; Concord at Roanoke.

Thursday
Lynchburg at Roanoke.

Friday
St. Johns at Bridgewater; Tusculum at Emory and Henry; Hampden-Sydney at Virginia; Lynchburg at Washington and Lee; George Washington and Roanoke; Medical College at Apprentice School.

Coffman and Cafego led a Tennessee 34-yard advance that stalled deep in Oklahoma territory.

The Vols, riding on that 7-0 lead, thwarted Oklahoma's every move, waiting for another break that came midway of the second quarter. Bob Seymour of Oklahoma, tackled hard, let the ball get away and Bob Andridge recovered for Tennessee on the Sooner 27.

Wood clicked with one out of four passes, substitute Ed Ciphers grabbing the ball 4 yards from the double stripe. Wood lost 5 yards in two tries and Wyatt came back into the game for the field goal. With Sam Bartholomew holding on the 22-yard line, Wyatt kicked it high over the cross-bar.

Cafego, flipping passes to Wyatt and Foxx, moved the Vols to the Oklahoma 30 in the third period. Wood set off the climax fireworks.

Wood started and ended the 73-yard drive. He returned McCullough's punt 12 yards to the Tennessee 12, dashed 21 yards a moment later as he eluded a cluster of Sooners, ran 14 yards around end, rifled a 23-yard pass to Jim Coleman, and scored from the 19.

Foxx place-kicked the extra and final point.

Scalzo Rated Over Transparenti

By Lewis F. Atchison.

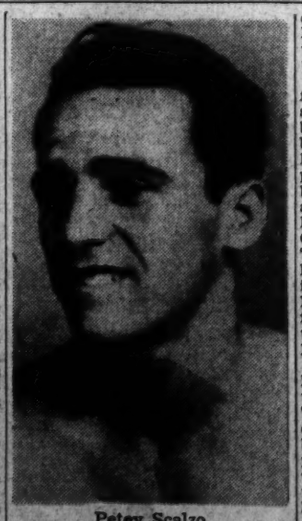
Petey Scalzo, uncrowned king of the featherweight division, ushers in the District's 1939 fistic campaign tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging young Lew Transparenti, of Baltimore, in the ten-round feature bout.

Fresh from a two-round knockout over Joey Archibald, who holds the New York State title, the clever Italian is a prohibitive favorite, but the bout has some merit, withal. It will be a clever ring general, Scalzo, against one not as skilled, but a puncher against a puncher.

Transparenti's lone recommendation is a paralyzing right hook that will stun a bull if delivered properly. He'll have to take a lot of punishment to get in his own licks, but it will be well worth the trouble if this strategy is successful. The lad's record shows 26 victories in 27 fights with average competition, and he cannot be sold short on that record.

Lou has had the dubious advantage of coaching by a slew of old-time ring greats, including former Weiterweight Champion Joe Dundee, and Kid Williams, former bantamweight title-holder, in his preparations for the engagement. He is reported in fine fettle, physically, and mentally aware of the fact that a victory over Scalzo will catapult him into the thick of the championship scramble.

In Scalzo, however, Transparenti meets a lad who has had the advantage of schooling under one of the game's outstanding pilots—Pete Reilly. Every move in his budding career is planned as carefully as a chess maneuver, and Reilly certainly has no intention of permitting a virtual unknown spoil his scheme to elevate Scalzo to the throne.



Petey Scalzo

Reilly nursed his protege carefully through the crude, earlier stage of his career, picking his spots but pitting him against increasingly better opposition as the youngster learned to handle his mitts and protect himself. Only twice in 50 bouts did the shrewd Reilly err, and these mistakes represent the lone blemishes on Scalzo's record. One, Petey's unexpected loss to Tony Dupree at Griffith Stadium last summer, undoubtedly reacted in his favor, for Archibald whipped Dupre handily, and probably signed for the Scalzo bout on the presumption that he could handle a man Dupre had whipped.

Scalzo is definitely headed for at least a championship bout—and, on the form he has shown, the title. The featherweight situation is decidedly unsettled at the moment, but Scalzo will not rust while the powers that be are examining the various contenders' claims. Tonight's bout is one designed to keep him in fighting trim.

Witter Stresses Need for Flow Of New Capital

Investment Bankers' Head Points Out Necessity for Jobs

By Jean C. Witter,
Dean, Witter & Co., San Francisco, President of Investment Bankers Association of America.

San Francisco, Jan. 2, (Special).—It is volume that measures the contribution of investment banking to the recovery of all other business in the country, because our real and all-important function, from the standpoint of the national economy, is to obtain funds for industrial and commercial concerns to use to expand and modernize their plants and equipment.

Preliminary figures indicate that less than $2,000,000,000 of corporate bonds and stocks were issued in 1938, and of this amount only $850,000,000 was for new capital. The balance was made up of refunding. There are beneficial effects, of course, from refunding old debts with new and less expensive contracts, but it does not provide capital to new industries to create new jobs. In pre-depression years, our investment banking machinery would gather together anywhere from $2,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 annually of new money; that is, from three to nine times the amount of new capital financing done in 1938. The volume of new capital financing last year was less than in 1937 or 1936, which were in turn greatly sub-normal. Only the volume of new financing for cities, States and other Governmental units was about normal.

Economists of every school agree that we will not have genuine recovery in this country until the flow of new capital into industry is able to take place in its normally constructive manner. This free flow is necessary before there can be a healthy pick-up in activity in the heavy industries, whose sluggishness has been responsible for the most stubborn part of the unemployment problem. There are innumerable obvious elements that contribute to the difficulty, but they boil down to the fact that investors who ordinarily would be anxious to put their money into new prospects now lack the confidence to do so.

Aviation Industry Optimistic for Year

The crescendo of political crises in Europe during 1938 had a marked effect on the trend of United States aviation thought, S. Paul Johnson, editor of Aviation, reports. For the past 15 years, he says, attention was focused on the building up of a great system of domestic and foreign air lines. As the year ended, however, pressure from abroad pushed the aviation aspects of national defense into the spotlight where he sees it is likely to remain for some time, or until some solution is found for world political problems generally. But whatever comes out of the hopper, United States manufacturers of airplanes, engines, and accessories may certainly look forward to 1939 without worrying about lack of orders on which to run their plants, he says.

SwopeExpressesConfidence

General Electric Co. is looking forward with confidence to a better year in 1939 than in 1938, Gerard Swope, president, declared in a year-end statement yesterday. Mr. Swope listed several factors which he thought would create increased opportunities for production of heavier capital goods in the electric and other industries.

They are closer co-operation of labor, industry and Government; the ever-increasing use of electricity; the great need for electric appliances in the home, and the demand for more power in factories, all leading to expansion of generating capacity in central stations.

Air Travel Increases

Pointing to a substantial gain in air passenger traffic in 1938 despite the general business depression, W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines, forecasts substantial increases for 1939 for the industry.

The airlines expect that stabilization of the industry will be aided by the provisions of Civil Aeronautics Authority which will enter its first full year of activity in 1939, he said.

Crashes Injure 5; Officer Hits Loading Zone

Long Island Motorist Charged With Reckless Driving in Collision

The officer, who lives at 2339 Fortieth street northwest, was admitted to Georgetown Hospital.

William B. Severe, 69, and his wife, Sarah H. Severe, 58, 717 Eighth street northeast, were injured in a collision on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard at the entrance to the Ammendale Normal Institute near Laurel.

At Casualty Hospital, Mrs. Severe was said to be suffering from a pelvic injury, cuts and bruises. Her husband sustained shoulder and rib injuries. Karekin Paster, of Amhorst, Long Island, driver of the other car, was released on a technical charge of reckless driving after posting collateral with Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips, of Berwyn.

A car driven by Donald Stetson, 24, of 5341 Twenty-eighth street northwest, struck a parked automobile in the 2600 block of Nichols avenue southeast. Stetson and a passenger, Marion Sundahl, 23, of 1704 Q street northwest, were taken to Casualty Hospital, where she was said to be suffering from a possible fractured hip. Both sustained cuts and bruises.

Food Industry on Upgrade

The turn for the better in many food companies came in midsummer of 1938, Food Industries reports. By autumn nearly all branches of the industry were making satisfactory earnings. The big exceptions were, of course, the vegetable canning and ice cream industries, which were sadly afflicted by abnormal conditions in early summer. Given a year of average weather, free from great extremes, in 1939, plus a reasonable stability of current prices, the earnings of the majority of the food companies will be moderate but satisfactory in 1939, the magazine asserts.

Textile Industry Expects Upswing To Carry Through

NewYork, Jan. 2.—The textile industry approaches 1939 with an entirely different outlook from that with which it entered in 1938, Textile World reports. At that time the 1930 bubble had burst and the industry was in the very middle of a depression. Today, the magazine says, the industry has had six months of recovery and is in the middle of that upward movement.

The textile curve of 1938 was just the reverse of that of the previous year. In 1937 there was a spectacular first half year of activity, followed by a half year of collapse. In 1938, on the contrary, the bad news was concentrated in the first half, with recovery progressing rapidly in the second half. The result was that the average monthly activity in textile mills during the second half of the year was one-third greater than the average for the first six months. What looked at the middle of the year like a 40 per cent deficit from 1937 was reduced to something less than a 20 per cent decline for the year as a whole.

On this basis, 1938 was slightly above "normal" (1923-25 average), but about one-fifth below the record year of 1937, which was rated at 125, on the basis of 1923-25 as 100.

Every expectation points to a continuation of a good rate of activity through at least the first six months of 1939. At a fair estimate the monthly activity during that period should approximate 120, or slightly below the rate for 1937. For 1939 as a whole, the best guess is that it should be well above "normal," in the neighborhood of 115, still on the 1923-25 average.

Chemical Firms See Gains

The chemical industry, which in 1938 operated at approximately 110 per cent of its 1935 average, is looking forward to new advances in 1939, Sidney D. Kirkpatrick, editor of Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering, says. All-time records may well be established by plastics, rayon, synthetic organic chemicals and petroleum products. Research now being prosecuted in more than 1,800 industrial and university laboratories is not only our best insurance of this continued progress, but is also the most promising source of new industries and resulting opportunities for increased employment of men and materials. Chemical industry's major problem, therefore, is to be understood and recognized by the American public as a new and powerful force for social as well as industrial advance.

Tells of Insurance Rise

An increase in the average amount of life insurance on individuals, bringing the average to a new high and the growth of total life coverage to record levels, are the two interesting features of 1938, according to Leroy A. Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. An average of $1,725 is carried by each of the 64,000,000 policy holders insured, and a total of $110,300,000,000 will be on the books of the Nation's companies at the end of the year, he said.

R. A. Lewis, president of the Tea Association of the United States, declared in a year-end statement yesterday that the tea trade is optimistic and greatly encouraged by the activity and good work of the tea bureau, which is sponsoring a $1,000,000 advertising campaign to increase the consumption of tea in the United States. The improved spirit of co-operation throughout the trade, he said, was the highlight of 1938.

Problem Solved; Yule Tree as Bird 'Cafeteria' Urged

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—Make your Christmas tree do double duty, the Virginia Wildlife Federation urged today, by turning it into a bird-feeding station.

Funeral Today For Father Bayer

Funeral services for the Rev. Arsenius Boyer, 86, oldest member of the Society of St. Sulpice in the United States, who died Sunday, will be held today at the Baltimore Cathedral. Death came to "the old saint," as he was known to many secular priests who studied under him, at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, after more than 60 years' service as a priest.

Priests of the Sulpican Seminary here, were recalled from Christmas holidays to attend the funeral rites. Many of the local secular priests, and a large delegation from the Catholic University will attend the services.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, will sing the requiem mass.

Born in St. Jean de Pourcharesse, France, in 1852, he was one of eight brothers, all of whom he outlived.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

From St. Petersburg, Fla., comes a question of the proper responses to an overcall in the adversary's suit. C. J. H. G. writes:

"East, dealer, bid one club. I, South, with no clubs and with good support for diamonds, hearts and spades, and a bright outlook for at least game, bid two clubs. West passed. My partner, North, bid two no trump with the following hand:

◇ J 7 5
♣ A 4 3

"Upon inquiring of my partner why he bid two no trump over my two clubs, he said 'to indicate weakness.' I contended that, according to the Culbertson system, my bid of two clubs called for his longest and strongest suit; that his bid of two no trump, rather than indicating weakness, showed a strong hand; that he should have bid two spades. I also contended that, especially in view of the fact that West passed, his correct bid would have been spades had he held this hand:

♣ 7 4 3

We agree with C. J. H. G.'s comments almost entirely. North should have replied with spades rather than no trump. A no-trump bid in response to a takeout double or an overcall in the adversary's suit is not a weakness bid. It shows a stopper in the opponent's suit and denotes some high-card strength. Therefore, South's bid was not as bad as his explanation made it seem.

North's contention is also correct that if South had held four little spades and a blank hand he should bid the four-card suit rather than no trump.

Today's Hand

NORTH - EAST - WEST - SOUTH

♠ 9 — ♡ Q J 10 7 — ◇ J 6 3 2 — ♣ 10 7 5 4

♠ A K J 10 6 4 2

♣ Q 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ♡.

Realizing that even the retentive memories of our bridge readers would be a little foggy during the holiday celebrations, we have reprinted a recent problem in today's box. Here is the solution: West leads the nine of hearts and East plays the ten. Declarer wins with the king and plays the ace of spades and the ace of diamonds. A small spade is led to North's eight, and the eight of diamonds is led through East. East must play small, or else South will trump the jack and establish a diamond trick. Declarer discards a small heart on the diamond, throwing West in the lead with the nine. West exits with a heart, South wins, and takes all of the spades, squeezing West in diamonds and clubs.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

INQUIRIES continue to come about the deadline on nominations for "Miss Civil Service." The deadline is January 15, midnight. Bulk of the nominations goes to the judges today, and they begin consideration. But the nominations are not closed—definitely not.

AMONG the most recent nominees for "Miss Civil Service" is the name of Mrs. Amy Putnam-Lesher, of the Weather Bureau Library. A native of Delaware, she was employed by E. P. Dutton & Co. until the outbreak of the World War. She entered the Medical Industries Section, War Industries Board, in 1918, and when the board was abolished, was transferred to the War Department. She has been with the Weather Bureau, first as library assistant and then as junior librarian since December 1, 1920.

Her master's degree was conferred in 1923; her A. B. in library science in 1932. The record of examinations which Mrs. Lesher has passed between 1918 and 1930 is: Editorial clerk, three times; translator in French, German, Spanish, Italian, Portugese, Dutch, Swedish, Dano-Norwegian; immigrant inspector, three times. She is affiliated with the American Library Association; the Special Libraries Association, the District Library Association, the Shakespeare Society of Washington, the Readers Club and the Columbian Women of George Washington University. Her sponsor says:

"In proposing Mrs. Lesher, I wish to draw attention to the fact that the only 'pull' that she has had throughout has been due to the recommendations of her instructors. No member of Congress, no inside politics can be credited with her success. The competitive system of the civil service has been the instrument employed in securing and keeping her position."

NOTES: The staid Agriculture Graduates School goes modern in a blurb announcing the forthcoming lectures (starting Friday, 5 p. m., South Building Auditorium) on personality adjustment: "If anything affects your eye, you hasten to have it removed; if anything affects your mind, you postpone the cure for a year," says the school, giving Horace the quotation credit. . . . The C. S. C. is ready to distribute to agencies and departments a revised edition of Form 2979, listing the points where full-time Federal medical officers are stationed and available to conduct examinations for the Government service. . . . Poor girl in the ICC, her worries are mountainous. She sat at a New Year "at home" party Sunday so deep in doubt, and the problem was this: whether or not to accept a temporary job in Peurto Rico, where, at this very season of the year, the flowers are blooming, the birds are singing and the lazy paint-blue surf idles on deep sandy beaches. The very idea of the opportunity would make anyone weep in his eggnog, and not for the doubt over going.

OTHER NOTES: Among the squawks is over the dance floor (cafeteria space) in Interior. The floor, being hard-surfaced, is tough on the ankles, and they'd rather have a floor of wood, if someone wants to be indulgent toward an important aspect of Interior dancing . . . Pantry note to Agriculture employes: The Welfare Store has a shipment of smoked meats from Beltsville (pure lard, 18c, shoulders, 15c, ham, 22c, etc.) . . . Agriculture employers form a stamp club Friday night, 8 o'clock, room 2347, South Building. And concerning the Congressmen who don't use stamps, they (and a few others in privilege) mailed 24,297,582 pieces during the year, with 3,726,925 weight in pounds—all of which would have cost $779,369.

PEOPLE who put money in letters and take no pains in addressing the envelopes are more numerous than the ways of human nature would seem to indicate. The number of these dead letters found in the last year to contain money totaled 60,329. The money found therein totaled $87,546.63. If the owner can't be traced down, the money is turned into the Treasury's general fund. But think of the thousands of human interest stories there—of the people who sent the money, gladly or unwillingly—and of those who waited for it and didn't get it.

Bob Burns Says—

The other night, me and my wife went to the Better Home Exposition and it made me realize that this is certainly a mechanical age. They got electric toasters, electric coffee pots, electric waffle irons, electric ice boxes, and electric stoves. It kind of made my wife self-conscious. She said: "Honey, a man really don't need a wife any more. What he needs is an electrician." And you konw, in a way, she's right. A person don't have to do much for himself these days. It's kind of spoilin' people. Now I know myself.

I drove into a filling station the other day and after the man had filled the gas tank, checked the oil, blown up the tires and washed the windshield, he asked me if there was anything else he could do. "Yes," I said, "Stick out your tongue so I can put a stamp on this letter."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Mrs. Lightfoot Has Visitors

Another's trouble and distress
A strange attraction doth possess.
—Old Mother Nature.

Mother Nature speaks truly. You have seen it yourself many times. There is an accident. At once a crowd begins to gather. A few hasten forward to try to help. The rest just stand around to look on. They cannot help. Yet somehow it is difficult to tear themselves away. When they do go their several ways they tell those they meet and these in turn hurry to the scene. Strange, isn't it?

Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer had met with an accident. She had tried to jump a wire fence and had failed to clear it. Now she was lying on the ground with one hind leg so entangled in the meshes of that fence that she was held a helpless prisoner. It had happened toward morning as the Black Shadows were beginning to retreat. Lightfoot had returned when she had failed to follow him into the Green Forest and now was walking around uneasily. He wanted to do something to relieve her distress and couldn't.

Hooty the Owl discovered her plight as he was returning to his favorite tree in the Green Forest after an all-night hunt. He alighted on a fence post and fixed a round-eyed stare on poor Mrs. Lightfoot. It was a cold, fierce, unsympathetic stare. It was most unpleasant. It made Mrs. Lightfoot feel even worse, if that were possible. Lightfoot saw this. With a snort of anger he plunged toward Hooty and reared as if to strike with his front feet.

"Who-o-o!" mocked Hooty, and merely flew to the next post. There he continued to sit even into broad daylight. He couldn't tear himself away.

Reddy Fox was the next visitor. From a distance he had noticed Lightfoot and his uneasy walking about in one place. His curiosity was aroused. When he was near enough to see Mrs. Lightfoot clearly he understood at once what had happened. He sat down a short distance away. Lightfoot dashed at him. There was fire in Lightfoot's usually soft eyes, but he no longer had his antlers, and without them he seemed shorn of his might. True those front hoofs of his were as sharp-edged as ever, but somehow without that crown of many sharp points, Lightfoot's threats did not seem serious. Reddy ran no farther than he had to and promptly returned when Lightfoot went back.

Reddy sat down and curled his tail around over his toes. When he said he was sorry to find Mrs. Lightfoot in such trouble there was no sorrow in his eyes.

"It is too bad. It is indeed. I fear you must have been careless, Mrs. Lightfoot," said he, shaking his head from side to side. "However that is nothing against you. All of us are careless at one time or another," he continued.

Mrs. Lightfoot made no reply and Lightfoot contented himself with stamping a threat of which Reddy took no notice.

"I hope," said Reddy, "that no Dogs happen along this way."

Mrs. Lightfoot shuddered. She hoped so too. She hoped so with all her might.

"And I hope the news doesn't reach Yowler the Bobcat," continued Reddy, and Mrs. Lightfoot shuddered again. "You are lucky that Yowler is not here in my place now," continued Reddy. "As it is you are quite safe from him until night. He isn't likely to be about in broad daylight and so there is little chance that he will hear the news. I understand that he is very fond of Deer meat. How lucky you are that this didn't happen when he was in the neighborhood. You are indeed, Mrs. Lightfoot."

Mrs. Lightfoot shuddered again and Lightfoot tried once more to drive him away, but tried in vain. Presently Reddy lifted his head and gave a sharp yapping bark. A little later Mrs. Reddy appeared. She looked at Mrs. Lightfoot and then at Reddy. There was a hungry look in her eyes. The same look was in his. "I thought I better call you," said Reddy, and grinned. So did Mrs. Reddy. Once more Mrs. Lightfoot shuddered. Then Lightfoot dashed at them. As long as he was there Mrs. Lightfoot was safe from them.

Arlington Oil Firm Robbed By 2 Bandits

Colored Men Take $720 From Cashier At Pistol's Point

Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509

Curb on Speeders Seen By Surprise

Highland Park.—Confidence that the efforts of the Arlington County Safety Council to have speed limit zones properly marked in the nearby community will be successful was expressed yesterday by Arthur Surprise, executive director of the council.

There has been a radical change in the attitude of R. I. Mount, district State highway engineer, of Culpeper, who has arranged a meeting for Friday afternoon at the Arlington County courthouse. At that time the removal of large billboard speed limit signs, which have been sharply censured by the council and by Sheriff Howard B. Fields, will be discussed.

For some time the Chamber of Commerce, has been seeking a curb on speeding through the business sections along Lee Highway and Jefferson Davis Highway both State roads. The fact that speed limit zones are not marked makes it difficult for the transient driver in particular to observe speed limits.

Mount has invited County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, and County Engineer C. L. Kinnier to join in the discussion and Surprise has asked Carol F. Winchester, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Clifton Stoneburner, county safety engineer and assistant executive director of the council, to assist him.

Surprise stated that parking restrictions on State roads too narrow to maintain two-way traffic also will be discussed.

Overtime parking charges against 50 Takoma Park residents were dismissed by Justice of the Peace H. C. Heffner yesterday with a warning against future violations.

The 50 auto owners had their cars ticketed for parking in excess of an hour on Carroll and Laurel avenues, in a recent police drive to enforce this ordinance.

Mayor John Adams and members of the town council have received numerous complaints against the parking regulation from members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church on Carroll avenue, who claim their cars were ticketed while they were attending services. The council will hold a special hearing on the question.

Justice Heffner, however, warned that so long as the 1-hour signs were posted, the regulation should be enforced.

Suit Launches Falls Church's New Postoffice

Condemnation Action Brought After Ten Years' Negotiations

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 345, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The Federal Government has posted notice of condemnation for a tract of land to be used as a site for the proposed central postoffice in the town of Falls Church.

The notice names Clark W. Crossman and Pansy E. Crossman of Falls Church and the Fairfax County treasurer and Falls Church town treasurer as defendants.

It states that the attorneys for the Government will apply to the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia at Norfolk for a condemnation jury to ascertain just compensation for the title to the land, on January 10.

The tract sought by the Government is located on the north side of the Lee highway at the corner of Columbia street, across Columbia street from the Baptist Church. It fronts on the Lee highway 100 feet and has a depth of 170 feet along Columbia street.

Citizens of the town of Falls Church for the past 10 years have been endeavoring to have the three small postoffices in the town consolidated. About four years ago an attempt was made by the Government to find suitable quarters for the consolidated office but none was available. Representative Howard W. Smith secured the appropriation of $75,000 for a Federal building in the town. In September 1937, the Government opened bids for a site for the new building, but all were rejected as not properly located or on the grounds that the bids were too high. Since that itme the Government agencies have been conducting surveys for the site and have decided upon the Crossman tract. H. H. Holt, jr., assistant United States attorney, will represent the Federal Government.

Supervisors to Meet

The seminnual meeting of the county board of supervisors will be held tomorrow in the boardroom at Fairfax. Salaries of county employes will be set for the coming year and preliminary work on the county budget for the 1939-40 fiscal year will be started.

To Choose Superviser

The county school board will meet Thursday and facing it will be the appointment of a supervisor of school maintenance and transportation. Last month the board voted to establish this office as a measure of economy to protect its investments in school plants. County Superintendent W. T. Woodson has handled such supervision in the past, but because of the increase in the number of large school plants and the amount of work necessary for maintenance of the plants and equipment and the school busses it was decided a full time officer was needed to handle the work properly.

Legionnaires to Entertain

The Falls Church Post, American Legion, is making plans to entertain the delegates from the posts in the Eighth Virginia District at a convention in Falls Church this month. District Commander Raymond King of Alexandria will preside. Among the speakers will be Department Commander Parks, of Abington; Department Adjutant Glenn Elliott, of Richmond; National Vice Commander Charles Crush, and Carl C. Brown, assistant director of rehabilitation of the American Legion headquarters in Washington.

Firemen Plan Dance

The Cabin John Volunteer Fire Department will hold a dance at the firehouse in Cabin John tomorrow night. David Touhey is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Freer Dies; Physician's Widow

Mrs. Elizabeth McCalmont Freer, 79, widow of Dr. James A. Freer, former Washington physician, died yesterday at a local nursing home following a protracted illness.

She came to the District many years ago with her parents, the late Judge and Mrs. John S. McCalmont, of Franklin, Pa. Her father was a Government official here under President Cleveland.

Survivors are Gorham F. Freer, Arlington, Va., a stepson; two stepdaughters, Miss Florence Freer, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Lawrence J. Gilson, Irvington, N. Y., and a brother, James McCalmont, of Washington.

Funeral services and burial will be at Franklin tomorrow afternoon.

George W. Emmart Rites Tomorrow

Masonic funeral services will be held tomorrow at his residence, 228 Fourteenth place northeast, for George William Emmart, street railway man, who died Sunday at Sibley Hospital.

The Rev. C. K. Ray, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church, will officiate and burial will be in Cedar Hill cemetery.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Janie Emmart; his mother, two sons, George, jr., and Howard Milton Emmart, both of Washington; three brothers, Robert and John Emmart, of Baltimore, and Ernest Emmart, of Pittsburgh; three sisters, Mrs. Etta Prell, Miss Emma Emmart and Mrs. Irene Preston, all of Baltimore.

Pelley Sees Rising Hope Of Cure for Railroad Ills

Expects Congress to Develop National Policy for All Means Of Transportation

By J. J. Pelley,
For The Washington Post.
President, Association of American Railroads.

Approach of the year 1939 brings to the railroads of the United States renewed hope for a solution of the critical financial situation which has faced them in the past 12 months. At no time has there been a greater public appreciation of their problems than now or a more earnest desire to formulate some plan that will solve the desperate situation in which the rail carriers find themselves.

With the coming of the new year, railroad managements hope that early action will be taken by Congress and the State legislatures looking toward development of a national transportation policy which will place all agencies of transportation upon an equality in matters of regulation, taxation and subsidies; recognize railroads as a business entitled to the same chance to earn a living as any other business and enable the railroads to re-establish their credit.

General business conditions have shown improvement in recent months. If this trend continues, and if conflicting public policies as to transportation can be welded into one sound, consistent national policy, unquestionably the railroads will share in whatever general prosperity comes to industry.

High Standards

The railroads in the past 12 months have continued to furnish to the public the highest standard of transportation, so far as dependability and efficiency are concerned, ever attained by them. Not only were new high records made in 1938 by the railroads of the United States in the average speed of both freight and passenger trains and in fuel conservation, but there also were numerous other increases in operating efficiency as compared with 1937.

From a financial viewpoint, however, 1938 was one of the most disappointing years that has ever been experienced. While in recent months net earnings of the Class I railroads have shown some improvement compared with the same period in 1937, this has been due in part to still further curtailments in expenditures and to the fact that the earnings made in the latter months of 1938 are compared with the corresponding periods in 1937, when sharp drops took place in traffic and revenues.

We estimate that after fixed charges have been met, Class I railroads in 1938 will have a net deficit of $125,000,000, compared with a net income of $96,000,000 in 1937. The net deficit in 1938 was the greatest for any year on record except in 1932, when it was $139,000,000.

1.39 Per Cent Return

While complete reports for the year are not yet available, preliminary reports indicate that the railroads will have a net railway operating income, before fixed charges, of $362,000,000, or a return of 1.39 per cent on their property investment. In 1937 it was $590,000,000, or a return of 2.26 per cent. In 1930, however, the railroads had a net railway operating income of $869,000,000, or an annual return of 3.28 per cent.

Gross revenues in 1938 approximated $3,550,000,000, a reduction of 14.8 per cent below 1937 and a reduction of 32.6 per cent under 1930. Operating expenses were approximately $2,710,000,000 in 1938, a decrease of 13.1 per cent below the preceding year and a decrease of 31.1 per cent under 1930.

Loading of revenue freight in 1938 totaled 30,362,000 cars. In only two years—1933 and 1932—since the compilation of these reports began in 1918, has this volume of traffic been smaller. The total for 1938 exceeded 1933 by 1,142,000 cars, or 3.9 per cent, and the 1932 volume by 2,182,000 cars or 7.7 per cent. Compared with 1937, loading of revenue freight in the past 12 months was a decrease of 7,477,000 cars, or 19.7 per cent, and compared with 1936, was

20 Per Cent Business Increase This Year Forecast by Babson

Predicts Stock and Bond Rise, More Jobs, Steady Wages, More Strikes, Dearer Food, Relief From Antibusiness Legislation

By Roger W. Babson.
Special to The Washington Post

Babson Park, Mass., Jan. 2.—Total business by the end of 1939 will be as good as—perhaps even better than—at any year-end since 1929. There may be periods when business will mark time, but the average volume for the year will be around 20 per cent above the 1938 level. Jobs, wages, retail sales, stocks and even farm prices should all chalk up good-sized gains. It is even possible that the sharp peaks of early 1937 will be topped—but this is a pretty long shot. Considering all factors, I forecast that 1939 will be a year of moderate prosperity.

There are no "hedges" tacked on to my forecast as there were in several years past. In 1937, I feared that the sit-downers would upset the apple-cart. A year ago, Washington's inertia worried me. But today, I can see no reason why the tides of recovery should not carry us vigorously forward—perhaps even to new highs since 1929! This will merely be a continuation of the uptrend which began in 1932. Frankly, I do not consider the 1937-1938 recession as anything more than a temporary, but sharp, interruption of the upward swing.

I emphasize this bit of "back history" because I believe it has an important bearing on confidence at the moment. Millions of people—as we get further and further away from 1929—look upon that year as setting a record which can never again be touched. As a result of the sharp ups-and-downs of the past decade, they have come to believe that hard times are now normal times in America. I disagree. I think that these people have lost their horizon! I do not believe that 1929 necessarily represents the pinnacle of American business.

It is true that some factors are less favorable than in 1929. Among them are taxes, bureaucracy and lack of faith. We have, however, the following favorable items today:

1. Our population has grown 7,000,000 since 1929.
2. Thousands of new products have been invented.
3. Production efficiency has soared 50 per cent in ten years.
4. A huge deferred demand for goods has piled up.
5. Credit reserves are the greatest in history.
6. Production costs are lower than last year.
7. Wholesale and retail inventories are relatively low.
8. Confidence is returning as "business baiting" lessens.
9. Billions will be spent on armaments—a necessary component of a sustained recovery movement.

An appraisal as to the probabilities of the characteristics of the present trend, as distinguished from the possibilities, appears to indicate that the answer is within an area that might be described as "hopeful conjecture"—at least, that is the way it appears to me.

General Motors Chairman Anticipates Better Year

By Alfred P. Sloan, Jr.
Chairman, General Motors Corporation.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—It seems reasonable to expect that 1939, as a whole, will be a somewhat better business year than 1938 has been. This belief is based on the expectation that the current recovery movement will be extended well into the new year. There is an improved demand for consumer goods, perhaps somewhat accelerated by the effects of large expenditures of public money. The future of the recovery trend, of course, will be importantly affected by political developments at home and abroad.

Looking at the situation from the long-range standpoint, the principal consideration is whether or not the current recovery will develop into a movement with a broad base and hence result in more normal business conditions over a period of time.

There undoubtedly exist the essential fundamentals of a broad recovery that might well be sustained. This appears to depend more upon political developments here and abroad as affecting the economy of the various nations than upon the existing economic possibilities. Here the recent election registered a definite rejection of the extravagant experimentation and deflationary attitude toward business enterprise prevalent during the past few years.

It appears to indicate a trend of thinking in support of a return to economic sanity, hence is definitely encouraging to the long-range position. If reflected in constructive action—and much such action is possible—and perhaps more particularly in lack of destructive action on the part of the forthcoming Congress, it might be the beginning of the establishment of a real confidence in the broad future opportunities of business, hence lead to a wide expansion of present enterprise and to the development of new enterprises. If this should come about, it would be reflected in increasing activity of the capital goods industries—a necessary component of a sustained recovery movement.

Summaries of 1938 and Forecasts for 1939, Written for The Washington Post's Annual Financial Review, Provide a Broad View Of Business and Finance in the Capital

By Hilleary G. Hoskinson.
Senior vice president, the Riggs National Bank, and president, District of Columbia Bankers Association.

During the past year the activities of the District of Columbia Bankers Association have been directed along the lines of promoting the general welfare and usefulness of the banks of Washington.

The association has co-operated in the more important civic undertakings, such as the annual drive of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, the Community Chest annual campaign and the American Red Cross Roll Call. The association has also continued to give hearty support to Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, which conducts courses in banking, law, economics and allied subjects for the benefit of the employes of Washington banks and certain financial institutions and departments of the Government.

Building, of course, is one of our city's principal business activities, and Washington banks have financed, in large measure, the new construction which has taken place this year. In the first 11 months of 1938 Washington banks extended credit to 2,890 borrowers for property improvements, under the provisions of title 1 of the national housing act, to the aggregate of $1,282,088. For the first ten months of 1938, according to the latest figures available, mortgage insured loans, under title II of this act, were granted to 171 property owners, totaling $1,139,100.

While the total check transactions of the Washington Clearing House Association for the first 11 months of this year totaled less than for the same period in 1937, business conditions here continue favorable. Bank deposits have increased consistently throughout the year, but the problem of employing these funds profitably has grown apace. Our banks are not only in an excellent position to meet the requirements of local business, but without exception the executive heads of our institutions are ready and anxious to render every service to the public consistent with sound banking principles.

Employment in the District of Columbia continues satisfactory, as local statistics indicate business here is making substantial strides. There is every indication that Washington will enjoy an even better year in 1939 than in 1938. The more important trade journals predict that 1939 will see increased employment, rising national income and increased volume of industrial production throughout the country, in which general improvement, of course, Washington will share along with other sections.

By E. C. Graham,
President, Hamilton National Bank.

The unsettled condition in foreign countries throughout the world today are naturally having a profound effect upon the efforts of this country to readjust itself to changing conditions and recoup its general economic balance so badly disturbed during the depression.

Here in Washington there is a greate tendency on our part to become befogged in the maze of reports on international complications and to become bewildered at the contradictory reports of theoretical economists with which the National Capital now abounds.

For my part, I am confident that the American people have the necessary capacity to adjust themselves to any sensible or needed new philosophy and that American business is capable of retrieving itself from the low curves of the early 30's.

As for the City of Washington, in my opinion it is on the verge of the greatest development and business activity it has yet experienced. I do not mean that we are to have a dangerous boom—that is unlikely to happen in Washington for several reasons. First, its entire economic structure is based on the Federal pay roll, which will continue to grow as new and permanent bureaus such as social security and National Labor Relations Board continue to be added. Indeed, with the Federal personnel now at 118,000 I predict it will increase to 125,000 during the coming year.

Second, Washington's industrial and business institutions are not affected by cycles of prosperity and depression to the extent that they are felt in other cities, most of which are highly industrialized.

Thirdly, the National Capital, by reason of the Nation's increasing leadership in world affairs and the centralization here of activities governing almost every phase of our national life, is steadily becoming the center of all the important factors of national and international affairs, thus bringing here organizations—representatives of organizations in increasing numbers each year. The growth of its educational institutions, the construction of the $50,000,000 Mellon Art Gallery, etc., all point to this.

But apart from mere predictions and added to the continued growth of the Federal pay rolls is the im-

Great Chain Store Industry At Crossroads, Hartford Says

President of A. & P. System in One of His Rare Public Statements, Accuses Wholesalers and Middlemen as Selfish

By John A. Hartford.
President, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—The year 1939 opens with the chain store industry approaching a crossroads in its history. During the coming year the full force of public opinion against the use of punitive taxes to destroy chain stores—which became increasingly evident during 1938—will be focused on those politicians and business groups who would levy such prohibitive taxes on chain stores that all their economic benefits to the consuming public would be wiped out.

In the past few months, opposition to chain store taxes has become more intense with growing public awareness of two essential facts.

First, the public has learned through educational activities and closer study of the question, that the real proponents of chain store destruction are the selfish minorities of wholesalers and middlemen, who have attempted to legislate the chains out of business for their own profit.

Second, as consumers have found themselves penalized by measures which served only to raise their cost of living, they also began to see that any increase in taxes has the net effect of lowering their standard of living by raising the costs of all the necessities of life.

These are some of the broad factors that point to defeat of the proposal of Representative Wright Patman of Texas to levy such a prohibitive tax on national chain stores that they would be forced out of business.

Representative Patman has said that he will introduce such a bill shortly after the opening of Congress in January. If modeled after a bill which he introduced but failed to have enacted during the last Congress, the new measure would levy a tax of as high as $1,000 on each store over 500 in a chain, times the number of States in which the chain operates.

Meanwhile, agitation for such taxes by wholesalers and some independents under their lash during the past year has resulted in a seeming paradox. Sales reports from various sections of the country show that where taxes on chain stores have been proposed, the net effect has been an increase in public patronage of chain stores.

Summarized, the events of the past year which point to defeat of the Patman bill are:

1. Militant opposition to the Patman bill by the American Federa-

Watson Cites Urgent Needs For Locomotives, Roads, Homes

By Thomas J. Watson,
President, International Chamber of Commerce; President, International Business Machines Corporation.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—The New Year offers favorable possibilities for progress because the development of this country is not finished. Our railroads need $1,000,000,000 worth of new equipment. Sixty-five per cent of our machine tools now in use are obsolete and two out of three steam engines are over 20 years old. We still have over 2,000,000 miles of dirt roads to improve and over 200,000 grade crossings to eliminate. We have over 50,000,000 acres of idle farm land which must be put to work by creating new foreign markets, and regaining former ones, for our farm products. We need 5,000,000 new homes today, and of our 23,000,000 existing one-family dwellings, 62 per cent require repairs.

It is the responsibility of government and industry to find the way for our people to earn the money with which to supply themselves with the necessities and comforts of life, so that our industrial capacity may be fully used and increased. To bring this about, among other things there must be eliminated such national trade barriers as class feeling, every form of taxation that retards progress, unjust criticism of our Government, and unjust criticism of business. Crime must be reduced, all unemployed who are able to work should be given jobs on self-liquidating projects and those not able to work should be put on a sound, permanent relief basis.

I believe that we will begin to accomplish real results along the above lines when business, finance and Government co-operate and get full productive value from our national income, which will mean bringing greater comfort and happiness to all of our people, regardless of their station in life.

Finally, we must continue to work for enduring world peace through the medium of world trade, by the progressive steps of stabilization of currencies, revision of trade barriers, settlement of international debts on a basis fair to both debtor and creditor, and a more equitable distribution of raw materials, food and clothing throughout the world.

Government Holds Cotton Enough for a Year's Supply

All-Time Record Keeps Price High Exports May Sink To 50-Year Low

By Frank J. Knell,
President, New York Cotton Exchange.
Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 2.—Most years bring new records of one sort or another in the cotton trade, and the past year has been no exception. In this instance the outstanding new record is in Government holdings of cotton. The year is drawing to a close with the Government of this country financing an amount of the domestic staple practically equal to one year's consumption at the current rate. It is a situation that would have been almost beyond imagination even a few years ago.

World trade in American cotton has been vitally affected throughout the year by the tremendous and growing accumulation of cotton in the hands of the Government. That accumulation has undoubtedly held the price of American cotton at a somewhat higher average level than would have otherwise prevailed, but in consequence world trade in the American staple has continued to shrink. It is thought in many quarters that exports of cotton by this country during the current season will be smaller than in any season for about half a century. Another result of the impounding of a large portion of the supply has been the development of wide premiums on nearby deliveries over distant deliveries, which has made it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for merchants in this country and abroad to carry stocks of the domestic staple.

15-Year Low

As the year ends, it appears that the world is using American cotton at a rate of around 11,000,000 bales per season. This is about the same as consumption during last season, but with that exception it is the lowest rate in 15 years. With domestic production during the past year totaling around 11,850,000 in terms of running bales, present prospects are that the world will have a larger carryover of American cotton at the end of the current season than at any previous time in the history of the industry. The failure of consumption to balance production which is in prospect for this season is due entirely to the decrease in the use of American cotton abroad, since the present outlook is that this country will use about an average quantity of the staple.

Meanwhile, foreign countries are producing a very large volume of cotton in the aggregate, although not so much as that produced last season and the season previous. The total production of foreign cottons this season is currently estimated at about 16,000,000 bales, compared with a peak of 18,476,000 bales two seasons ago. The decrease is due primarily to a great decline in the output of China because of the war in that country and to a short crop in India because of unfavorable growing conditions. Six years ago foreign countries were producing about 10,000,000 bales a year.

Consumption High

It is encouraging to find that notwithstanding the factors that are tending to reduce world consumption of cotton—such as increased use of rayon, nationalistic policies of totalitarian countries, and war in Spain and the Orient—the world is using cotton at a very high rate, although not at so high a rate as in a few recent seasons. It is probable that world use of the staple is now running on a basis of about 27,500,000 bales per season. The largest consumption in any one season was recorded in the season before last, when the total was 30,689,000 bales. Prior to the last three seasons a world consumption of all cottons of 25,000,000 to 26,000,000 bales was considered good. It seems clear that if Europe could solve its political problems without war, and if the wars now being waged should be terminated, world

Treasury Holds 58% of World's Monetary Gold

Gold stock of the United States rose $1,620,000,000 this year to the highest level in history at $14,380,000,000, or 58.3 per cent of the total known world stock. A year earlier the total represented 53.2 per cent of the world holdings. European war scares and rumors regarding further devaluation of major foreign currencies accelerated the flow of gold to these shores. Gold in London reached 150 shillings, the highest point in the 150-year history of the English bullion market on hoarding demand.

Stock Exchange Trade Lagging, Martin Asserts

Investing Public Behind Pace of Most Business Says Street Executive

By William McC. Martin, jr.
President, New York Stock Exchange.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—Although the volume of transactions on the New York Stock Exchange in the latter half of the year showed substantial improvement over the first half, our business is still severely depressed. Its recovery has not kept pace with that which has been witnessed elsewhere. The public apparently does not yet have that degree of interest in securities which we have come to expect as the accompaniment of returning prosperity.

The stock exchange has been suffering, of course, from the same retardation which has been felt in other sections of the capital market. For us, however, the situation is not as discouraging as many observers consider it to be. While many problems remain to be solved and many uncertainties removed, at home and abroad, before we may expect to see the resumption of healthy investment and capital flows, there are, with respect to this vital aspect of the recovery, favorable portents which everybody recognizes and which are already reflected in the general attitudes and hopes of business and finance.

Investors Encouraged

From the viewpoint of the New York Stock Exchange, contemplation of the future is more hopeful by reason of the ever-growing recognition of the advantages to the investing public inherent in organized securities markets as contrasted with unorganized markets. There is abundant testimony of this increasing recognition and it is bound to be reflected in time, even to a greater extent than in the past, in the public's preferences and investment habits.

That the investing public is alert to the advantages which organized securities markets possess is clearly evidenced by the pressure which is being exerted for general application of those wholesome measures which have been introduced into the exchanges. Listing on the New York Stock Exchange is, in itself, a hallmark which means that securities have passed a definite test of acceptability and that exacting requirements with respect to demonstrated earning power, financial position and sound practices have been met.

Listing Demands Heavy

As a prerequisite to listing, companies must supply the exchange with full information as to their financial position, their earnings, the diversification of their business, the diffusion of their ownership and other pertinent facts which a potential investor needs to have in order to pass judgment upon the worth and marketability of securities.

By listing, a company invites the public to deal in its securities, formally abandons its status as a private concern and subjects itself to the exchange's continuing listing requirements with respect to its finances, dividend policies, accounting practices and other phases of its operations affecting the security holders. Listing necessitates the issuance of periodical financial statements of a comprehensive character and prompt reports of matters of interest to security holders looking toward full publicity.

There are many other advantages which go with a listing on an organized exchange and it is not only gratifying, but prophetic of the growth which such exchanges may expect, that the desirability of listing, from the viewpoint of corporations, and of dealing in such securities, from the public's point of view, is becoming more widely recognized.

Trend of Steel Output in 1938 Reverses 1937

$23,000,000 Loss in 1st 9 Months Almost Made Up in Final Quarter

By Walter S. Tower,
Executive Secretary, American Iron and Steel Institute.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—During the first nine months of 1938 operations resulted in aggregate losses for the steel industry estimated at approximately $23,000,000, owing to the reduced volume of business, combined with other factors. Increased production during the last quarter indicate some probable improvement in the earnings statement, which will be made for this period.

For the entire year the steel industry operated at about 40 per cent of capacity, a reduction of more than 40 per cent from the operating rate of 72 per cent during 1937. Production of steel fell back almost to the level of 1934.

Output of steel ingots for 1938 was close to 28,500,000 gross tons, compared with 50,569,000 gross tons in 1937, and with 47,768,000 in 1936. Aside from the depression years of the 1930's, only one other year in more than a generation has averaged so low in steel output.

The trend of operations in the industry during 1938 was almost the reverse of that for 1937.

Upturn in Last Half

The year began with operations at a deeply depressed level, and during the first half of 1938 the operating rate averaged only 31 per cent of capacity, as compared with 85 per cent in the first half of 1937. In the last quarter of 1938 the rate averaged close to 57 per cent, compared with 41 per cent in the last three months of the preceding year.

The highest monthly rate reached in 1937 was 90 per cent in April, while the peak for 1938 was 62 per cent in November. The upturn during the final quarter of 1938 was the most pronounced of any fourth quarter since 1921.

During the last nine years the industry has earned an average of approximately only 1.5 per cent annually on its capital investment. In the ten years from 1920 through 1929 the return averaged 5.5 per cent. The year 1939 seems likely to mark the end of the only ten-year period in the modern history of the industry in which no new high record of yearly production was recorded.

In the face of adverse conditions affecting operations during 1938 wage rates to employes in the industry were unchanged, remaining at the highest level in the history of the industry.

Employment Steady

Some reduction in employment and in total pay rolls was necessitated by lower production rates, but the declines in these items were not as severe as the shrinkage in output. Compared with a drop of 56 per cent in production during the first nine months of 1938, employment declined only 26 per cent.

Wage earners for the first nine months of the year averaged 385,000, compared with 521,000 in the corresponding period of 1937, when a record was established in employment. Before the close of 1938, however, the tide of employment had turned and additions to pay rolls were reported during the last quarter.

Total pay rolls of the industry in 1938 were more than $600,000,000 as compared with $976,083,000 in 1937, which was the highest ever reached. The upturn in the steel business which came in the latter half of the year had its origin chiefly in the larger demand for light steels, such as sheets and strip from the automobile industry. That improvement broadened somewhat as the year progressed. A better demand appeared from oil and gas, structural and some other lines, although the gains were not as large in these departments as in the steels used by automobile companies.

Purchases by the railroads was far below normal, some encouraging improvement appeared in the construction industry although demand from this source was still far below the levels which prevailed before 1030.

R. C. A. Provides Radio Center For Capital

As the result of increased activity of the Radio Corporation of America and its interest in making available its various services to the citizens of the Nation's Capital, Washington now has a radio center at Fourteenth street and New York avenue.

Housed in the modern Trans-Lux Building are local offices of each member of the RCA family—the department of information of the R. C. A., the National Broadcasting Co., R. C. A. Communications, Inc., Radiomarine Corporation of America, R. C. A. Institutes and RCA-Victor. Every phase of the corporation's activities is represented.

The activities of the Radio Corporation extend to every corner of the earth. Washingtonians, through the facilities of the Radiomarine Corporation, can communicate with their friends on liners in mid-ocean; R. C. A. Communications, whose operating headquarters are at 1112 Connecticut avenue, provides service to 46 foreign countries, maintaining more than 60 direct circuits for that purpose, and the networks of the National Broadcasting Co., through stations WRC and WMAL, give local citizens entertainment from the Nation's greatest artists.

Market Year Disappointing But Holds Promise for 1939

Last Year About 80% as Good as 1937
Industry and Employment Lower
Last Half Brings Vigorous Recovery

By Edward H. Collins,
Special Correspondent to The Post.

There are two methods of appraising a business year. One may view it statistically, or one may view it dynamically. By the first test 1938 was a distinctly disappointing 12 months; by the second test it was a period upon which it is possible to look back with considerable satisfaction.

According to the accepted measurements of comparative business and financial health, 1938 was only about 80 per cent as good a year as 1937. Industrial production was off 23 per cent, employment was 20 per cent lower, factory pay rolls were down 27 per cent, and freight traffic lost about 20 per cent. It is necessary to go back to 1934, the last year before the recovery from the 1929-'32 depression really took hold, to find a 12-month as poor as the one just ended.

That is one way of looking at the picture. The other way is to consider the year, not as a unit, but as a 12-month period, the first half of which, roughly speaking, was identified with the end of a depression that had begun a year earlier, the second half of which witnessed the beginning of a new and pronounced recovery movement in the financial markets and in business. Thus broken down, we find that while the average rate of business activity for the entire 12 months was somewhere between that of 1934 and 1935, this was the result of six months of sub-1934 business followed by six months of activity approximating that of the highly satisfactory second half of 1935. Indeed as the year came to an end the standard indices of business were much nearer their level of 1936 than those of 1934.

A year ago at this time the country was entering January financially and psychologically depressed by ten months of declining stock market prices and nine months of steady deflation in commodity prices, and with industrial production—which had held up surprisingly well until as late as October, 1937—plunging violently downward. At that very moment, however, the flattening out of the downward curve was at hand, for after dropping from 84 to 80 in January the business index of the Federal Reserve Board fell only four more points in as many months thereafter, touching its low of the movement in May and making its first feeble recovery effort, a rise from 76 to 77, in June. The advance which began with this month has progressed with only minor interruptions down to the present time.

The Depression in Retrospect

Now that the 1937-1938 episode is a matter of history, it is possible to evaluate it in terms of other similar phenomena, something that was not possible 12 months ago. From this vantage point it is clear that the term so frequently used, at least in its early stages, to describe this deflation in prices and business, the term "recession," was a misnomer. For, although the debacle was comparatively short-lived, in magnitude it takes rank well up with a majority of the depressions of the past, whether judged in terms of price declines or of business contraction. This is conspicuously true with respect the behavior of staple commodity prices. Moody's index of sensitive prices, which had climbed to above 228 in early April, 1937, tumbled to a low of 130 in June, 1938, a drop of 98 points, or 43 per cent. Only once in our modern history, namely, in the 1920-1921 depression—almost exclusively a commodity price depression—has the precipitatness of this decline been surpassed. In the equivalent 15-month period of the 1929-1932 depression the fall in commodity prices was only 30 per cent.

What was true of commodity prices was almost equally true in the case of stock prices and business. There have been nine bear markets in the present generation, beginning with that of 1920-'03 and coming down to that of 1937-'38. The record of this period, based on the Dow-Jones industrial averages, reveals that, measured in points, the 1937-'38 decline (from 194.40 to 98.95) was far and away the greatest of these, with the single exception of the 1929-'32 collapse. On a percentage basis it has been equaled—again, excepting 1929-'32—only once since the turn of the century. That was in 1906-'07, when the averages fell from 103 to 53, or 49 per cent.

So much for the quantitative aspects of the 1937-1938 collapse. Qualitatively, it may be said that it was characterized by three features which distinguished it from the average depression of similar dimensions in the past. These were: (1) the violence of the decline, (2) the total absence of credit stringency, and (3) its almost completely domestic nature, both with respect to its origins and its repercussions.

As to the first of these characteristics, it was touched upon above in discussing the extent of the recent price decline. It is brought out more sharply when we compare the rate of deterioration in 1929-1932 with that of the recent collapse. In the former period business declined 68 per cent, but the process covered a period of 47 months; in the more recent period a fall of 43 per cent was recorded in later months. The monthly rate of contraction in the first case was 1.04 per cent, in the latter case slightly more than 3 per cent.

Tightening money rates and a shortage of credit have been almost invariably accompaniments of previous depressions. Neither of these manifestations was present during 1937-'38. As business contracted and prices fell there was a natural resulting shrinkage in the volume of bank credit, but at no stage of either the depression or the boom which preceded it was there anything which, by any stretch of the imagination, could be described as a credit stringency. The stock market call money rate which, for good or ill, once moved sensationally during such cylical episodes, remained unchanged throughout the period at the purely nominal rate of 1 per cent. Brokers' loans, which had soared to $8,500,000,000 at the peak of the 1924-'29 bull market, only to fall away in the ensuing three years to $240,000,000, a drop of $8,260,000,000, did not reach $1,200,000,000 at any time in 1937, and never fell below $450,000,000 in 1936, an extreme range of less than $750,000,000.

An American Episode

For more than a year now controversy has raged as to the origins of the 1937 breakdown of business. The various theories put forward were discussed at some length here last January, and there is no point in presenting them again at this time. Those who declared a year ago that the collapse was the result of a cessation of Government spending, or that it represented a "strike of capital," or the existence of "monopolistic" price rigidities in the economic structure are probably quite as convinced of the merits of these arguments today as they were at that time. On the other hand, those who insisted last January that the deflation of 1937-'38 was the inevitable sequel to the artificial stimulation of business in 1936; that it was accentuated by the opportunistic and politically encouraged drive for high wages in the spring of 1937, and that it merely demonstrated that there can be no genuine and lasting recovery until there is a definite improvement in the relations between business and the Government—those who felt this way are probably of the same opinion today.

Finally, the following table, based on the index of production of the Standard Statistics Co., shows the the comparative severity of 12 business depressions since the beginning of the century.

Curb Exchange Looks Forward To Better Year

Reorganization of Big Primary Market Soon To Be Completed

By Fred C. Moffatt,
President, New York Curb Exchange.
Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 2.—At the end of a year it seems in order to attempt to distill from oceans of facts a guess as to what the future holds. The guess of one connected with the management of a securities exchange as to what such exchange has in store for it must always be based primarily upon his estimate of the future of industry, but this year his guess must also be conditioned by his appraisal of the effect of Government attitude toward, and of local conditions on, his exchange.

Government regulation has penetrated so far into private enterprise that business managers and public investors have come to question whether or not the system of private as opposed to public financing of industry will prevail. Our society is based upon private financing and private operation. Its constant problem is how to make our system function in the best interest of all. We have tested for some years the method of detailed prohibition, but without much success. There is today encouraging evidence that business believes that government can be helpful, that government senses that "you must not" can be carried too far and that labor understands that business prosperity is essential to satisfactory wages. When harmony between these elements becomes a fact and when the public believes that such harmony exists, stock exchanges will once more be busy places.

Gains by Experiment

The regulation of securities exchanges by government is still in an experimental stage. Each month is bringing government and exchange management into closer co-operation and into a better understanding. The conclusion, which is general, that official supervision of exchanges in one form or another is here to stay has removed much uncertainty and has permitted concentration upon the object of seeking a minimum of friction with a maximum of agreement. The securities exchanges and the Securities and Exchange Commission are today working in the harmony which is essential to the public interest. We are confident that, with the commission continuing its willingness to study before reaching final judgment, the association, notwithstanding certain limitation prescribed by the securities exchange act, of the commission and the exchanges will greatly increase the value of exchanges to the public.

As opposed to the broad industrial uncertainties the local factors conditioning the future of the New York curb exchange appear encouraging. Early in 1939 the reorganization of the exchange will be complete. The reorganization plan recognizes, to a greater extent than ever, the public interest in the operation and management of an exchange. The writer is confident that the changes provided will bring to investors further justification for a belief that the New York curb exchange is a market where private gain is subordinated to, and is dependent upon, service to the public.

No appraisal of what the future holds for the New York curb exchange would be complete without an answer to the question which is sometimes asked, "Why are there two stock exchanges in New York City?" The answer is that the New York curb exchange fulfills a different function from that fulfilled by the New York stock exchange.

Primary Market

The New York curb exchange exists primarily as a market place for the securities of new enterprises as distinguished from the older and more seasoned securities listed upon the New York stock exchange. The New York curb exchange is not a competitor of the New York stock exchange; it is rather a feeder to that exchange of seasoned securities. No better evidence of the relationship which exists between the two exchanges may be found than the fact that of the 1,244 stock issues now listed upon the New York stock exchange, 633 issues (or predecessor issues) or 51 per cent vere originally dealt in upon the New York curb exchange and the further fact that there are today 1,112 stock issues dealt in on the New York curb exchange.

It would be a bold and, perhaps, not too well informed prophet who would predict any substantial increase in security purchases while present national and international uncertainties continue. However, it does not require much faith to prophesy that many national uncertainties will be rapidly solved and it takes no boldness whatsoever to predict that when new enterprise and the adventurous dollar start forward again the New York curb exchange will once more become the active public market place of normal times.

Horning Hails U. S., Canada Trade Treaty

Economist Believes Accord May Effect Wider Understanding

By F. J. Horning,

Assistant Economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal. Special Dispatch to The Post.

Montreal, Jan. 2.—The culmination of months of research and negotiation in the final signature last November of the new trade pacts between Canada and the United States and the United States and Great Britain was an outstanding achievement. These agreements constitute the longest stride yet taken from the general policy of extreme nationalism and self-sufficiency, embracing high tariffs, import quotas, exchange regulations and other restrictions, strangling international trade and retarding recovery from the world depression. The new agreements, affecting as they do what is normally the largest volume of trade between any group of three nations, may serve as an example for similar action elsewhere, and in this way, the arrangements just concluded may have repercussions over a much wider area than that of the countries immediately concerned.

The trade accord, in addition, will undoubtedly strengthen the cordial relations already existing between the American people and those of the British Commonwealth of Nations, and bind these great democracies more firmly at a time when the democratic philosophy and system of government are most seriously threatened.

The commerce between these three great trading nations is of paramount importance to each. It is, moreover, not only very extensive but most complex. It includes an enormous number of individual items, many of them the result of specialized high-grade manufacturing operations, and running the whole gamut of industrial processes.

Some Advantages Yielded

In order to facilitate the negotiations between the London and Washington authorities, Canada relinquished some of the advantages gained under the Ottawa Empire trade pacts, such as the preferences accorded wheat, soft wood lumber and apples, of which products the United States is a considerable exporter.

The most important concession made by the dominion, however, whether considered from the standpoint of industrial protection or governmental revenue, is the removal of the special 3 per cent excise tax which has been levied since 1930 against the duty-paid value of imports not covered by the British preference.

Furthermore, Canada reduces customs rates on 283 tariff items, including a wide range of agricultural, fishery and forestry products, tobacco and spirits, chemicals and paints, earthenware, glassware, metals and their products, electrical apparatus, motors and motorcycles (but not automobiles), aircraft, precision tools, heavy construction and mining equipment, household appliances, farm implements, fishing equipment, rubber tires, textile and leather products. In addition existing rates upon 146 other items are maintained or bound. During the Canadian fiscal year ended March 31 last, the value of the imports under the items affected by the agreement was about $280,000,000, or approximately 58 per cent of the total value of Canadian imports from the United States.

In return Canada gets reductions in duties on 129 items and subitems of the United States tariff, and fixed duties for the duration of the agreement upon 23 others. In 1937 the value of the imports into the United States from Canada under these items and subitems, according to the United States trade returns, was $327,500,000, as compared with total imports from Canada valued at $394,250,000. The concessions, therefore, cover 83 per cent of Canadian sales to the United States. Of the total imports, goods to the value of $156,200,000 were dutiable. The new agreement contains concessions on 170 dutiable items and subitems, covering imports valued in 1937 at about $125,000,000, or 80 per cent of the total imports of dutiable goods. Free imports in 1937 were valued at $238,000,000. The new agreement contains 32 bindings of free entry, covering imports in 1937 to the value of $203,000,000, or 85 per cent of the total value of free goods.

Sharp Business Gain Tops List of Records

New York, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—The 33 1-3 per cent recovery in business in the six months from May to November broke all past records for a soaring rally. Several other records were made during the year, including:

New highs in public debt, United States holdings of gold, London gold price, trading in hide and copper futures, United States soybean crop, world carryover of American cotton, Government holding of cotton and spot butter sales, and new lows in French franc in gold terms, and in Santos coffee.

imposing sums of money to be spent in and near Washington in the next 18 months. The amount is surprising and is as follows:

District budget (about)	$ 50,000,000
WPA loans for local construction	18,193,000
Navy Department (hospital-testing basin, etc.)	19,354,643
Army program (city and nearby)	20,450,000
Park Service	1,116,800
Other projects such as Gravelly Point, estimated private construction in and near Washington	124,370,000
Total	$233,484,443

Surely this is an immense sum to be placed in the business channels of a city of 630,000 inhabitants whose economic stability is assured by the Federal Government and its personnel.

For private business the local banking institutions have ample funds to finance and extend credit to any legitimate undertakings.

The banks are more than anxious to make business loans. At this time with a large part of the money invested in Government bonds which are yielding such small returns banking houses are glad to finance sound industrial and business institutions and place their money in a field which gives a higher earning capacity.

Washington is an unusually fortunate city. Its history shows that at times of great national stress it has always grown and enjoyed its greates periods of prosperity. Added to this is the permanent place Washington is taking in world affairs.

There is no doubt in my mind that as the Capital City of our Nation Washington's prosperous future is assured.

By Harry G. Meem,

President, the Washington Loan & Trust Co.

The past year's business of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. has produced three gratifying results. First, an increase in deposits; second, greater demand for credit and a consequent increase in the volume of loans made and, third, reduction of the amount of idle cash.

While earnings have not reached the peak attained in 1937, the year has been very satisfactory in view of the general recession in many lines of business, offset here to an appreciable extent by the demand for loans under Titles I and II of the national housing act.

The preponderant problem confronting the banker today is the productive employment of the funds that are accumulating in the banks as the result of the restored confidence of the public in them as the ideal depository. If a similar confidence could be developed in the business outlook, banks would be in an exceptional position to provide credit to worthy borrowers.

Every present indication points to a definitely better business year ahead than 1938 has been. With ample credit resources and low interest rates prevailing, business is in an exceptional position to take advantage of the prospects for enlarged volume and increased earnings. It is particularly pleasing to us that the Washington Loan & Trust Co. is directly serving nearly 50,000 customers and through them, probably, several times the number. It gives the directors and officers of the bank a very deep sense of their responsibility and a keen desire to promote their interests by every means in our power. We hope that the year ahead will afford us many opportunities to prove it.

By O. H. P. Johnson,

President, the National Metropolitan Bank.

It seems to me that business prospects are brighter, and the outlook for 1939 appears encouraging. There is no question of ample funds available for sound investment, and banks are more than anxious to lend any assistance in their power to cooperate with business. Inventories are low, and this should lead to a stimulation of certain industries.

The housing situation appears to be far below the saturation point and this will provide a wide variety of employment. One need not be an optimist to view the future with untroubled eyes, and many perplexing problems of the present will doubtless be worked out satisfactorily.

We have probably been through the worst of the depression, and I feel that the time is not far distant when confidence and enthusiasm will replace fear and despair.

H. Prescott Gatley,

President, National Savings & Trust Co.

The winding up of the present year naturally makes us stop, look and listen, not only to review the occurrences of the old, but to try and visualize what the new holds in store for us.

Apparently, the trend is toward a more complete and cooperative understanding between the Government and business. This would also seem to be true as between capital and labor. If these things in fact come to pass the result will go far in the advancement of conditions throughout the entire country. It will lend a stability and encouragement to the investment of new capital and consequent increased employment of labor.

Idle capital is not conducive to accomplishment; active capital leads to prosperity. It is to be hoped, therefore, there will be concerted efforts to bring about results that will inure to the benefit of all. I believe much can and will be done to this end in the coming year.

From a local viewpoint there seems to be every reason to believe that Washington during the next year will continue to expand. Business should continue to be most satisfactory. The retail business in the city should expand considerably, due to the increasing growth of the population in Washington and the areas surrounding it, and likewise due to the constantly growing influx of persons who are temporarily in Washington for one reason or another.

By John A. Reilly,

President, the Second National Bank of Washington. Special Dispatch to The Post.

I salute the new year with complete confidence. There are a number of green lights ahead which should keep business moving along in Washington. A study of recent reports furnish evidence of upward business trends for the immediate future.

Our city is playing a new role in the world's scheme of things. With an everincreasing population, business and financial leaders here are being called upon to render service of the highest order. Let us scientifically approach our new problems, establish sound basic policies, and 1939 will be the beginning of better days.

By Francis G. Addison, Jr.,

President, Washington Board of Trade. Special Dispatch to The Post.

Business, during the closing months of 1938 made substantial strides in the Washington Metropolitan area, thereby giving ample reason for an optimistic outlook during the coming year. One of the most significant comparisons is made by the figure for check transactions in the Washington Clearing House. In November of 1938 such transactions amounted to $101,236,048, only about $25,000 less than in the corresponding month of 1937, after having run substantially behind the previous year in each of the 10 months between January and October.

Retail stores apparently made sharp gains toward the end of 1938. Department store gains were especially sharp during December, and reports to the Department of Commerce indicate that the Christmas volume will exceed last year's figure by a noticeable percentage.

Christmas business at the Washington Postoffice reached an all time high, while other business reports, such as the number of telephone calls, electric output, etc., continued previously well defined upward trends.

Especially significant to Washington business interests is the fact that toward the end of 1938 the number of Federal employes in the District of Columbia passed the previous all time high established during the World War. With this increase has come, it is believed, further population gains. These gains, however, are probably greater outside the District borders of the metropolitan area than within the Capital City, thus continuing the trend which has been evident for several years.

Building activity greatly increased, too, during the past several months, though here again principal gains are outside the borders of the District. It is apparent, in view of activity briefly noted here, that there is good reason for feeling generally optimistic over conditions for 1939.

The one local influence which continues to cause many residents alarm is the continuing high relief load, expansion of municipal functions and consequent increasing taxes. We await, with a great deal of interest, the reports which will soon be made by experts who have been studying the tax structure, reorganization of the local government and the administration of relief. Congressional action on their recommendations will have an important bearing on the future of all local residents.

By Richard W. Griswold, C. L. U.

President, District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. Special Dispatch to The Post.

Washingtonians may well take pride in their life insurance record of recent years. For here is another field of civic activity in which the District sets the pace for the rest of the Nation. Our position of leadership was emphasized in the year just past, and all signs indicate its maintenance in 1939.

The District of Columbia is undoubtedly the most intensely "life-insurance-conscious" area on the face of the globe. For statisticians tell us that our per capita coverage here is more than double that of the Nation as a whole, while the United States owns over 75 per cent of the world's life insurance—with less than 7 per cent of the world's population.

Capital's High Rank

With the possible exception of New York, the District shows a higher average protection per person than any other territory in the world. There are probably two reasons for this: our per capita income is the highest in the United States; and our citizenry has been drawn, in such a cosmopolitan way, from a most progressive and enlightened cross-section of the country. While the extent of life insurance ownership is everywhere dependent on "marginal income" or ability to buy, it is emphasized wherever there is an intelligent recognition of the individual's responsibility to self, family, and society.

That such recognition is very marked among those who live and work in the District, is suggested by the summarized figures in another column. See last page. In so far as the local figures are concerned, they indicate not only a high degree of appreciation here for what life insurance is and does, but also a high degree of effectiveness on the part of the local life insurance forces, in crystallizing that appreciation into permanent ownership. And above all, these figures suggest something of the importance or the role played by life insurance in the financial life of the District.

Independence

It is in this latter field that the life insurance companies have been answering an increasingly appreciated need in recent years. When one reflects that, of the 22-3 billions of life insurance dollars disbursed in the United States in 1938, barely a billion, or 37½ per cent, was paid to beneficiaries at death of the policyholder, while the other 62½ per cent was paid to living policyholders themselves, one realizes that the life insurance companies must have given the American public a practical start along the road of personal financial independence, long before enactment of the social security legislation in 1935. Further, that the the Social Security Administration and the American life insurance companies, dovetailing enforced mass-thrift with individual and voluntary thrift, will together in future years work profound social changes for us all.

By William Montgomery,

President, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

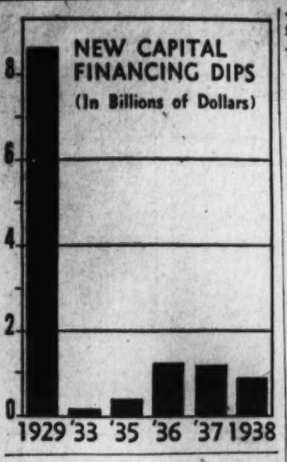
Safe, secure, stable, indispensable—these four words, I believe, should be used in any attempt to evaluate what life insurance means to us, individually and in our community and Nation.

The safety of life insurance has been proved time and time again in periods of national stress. Always, life insurance has come through with flying colors and gone on to greater goals of accomplishment.

However completely life insurance has proved its safety, its security, and its stability in years gone by, it never has done it so remarkably and so conclusively as in the recent past. Perhaps the whole story of life insurance's impregnability is best illustrated in figures which reveal that during the economically difficult years from 1929 to the present, the assets of the legal reserve life insurance companies have risen from approximately $16,000,000,000 to nearly $26,000,000,000.

Thus it is to be seen that even under the stress and strain of depression and recession, life insurance grows ever stronger, safer, more secure. Because of this remarkable virtue, life insurance has become an indispensable part of our individual, community and national lives.

One might well say that life insurance is the great underlying foundation stone of national economic security, for it is the bulwark of the family, the safeguard of the home and the future of both policyholders and beneficiaries, and it plays a vital role in the upbuilding of every phase of our country's business—industrial and agricultural.



It is difficult for us to imagine what life would be without life insurance. Fortunately, we do not have to. Life insurance, built upon the solid, unshakable rock of these billions in assets—a rock which grows more and more impregnable from year to year—will continue for all time to do all of those things which it accomplishes with such success and safety.

In protecting the home, in providing for the future of both beneficiaries and living policyholders—and it is important to note that 60 per cent of all life insurance payments go to living policyholders—in exerting its beneficent influence in every direction, life insurance as a whole is a national asset of the very first importance, and in its future welfare and progress every American has a profound interest.

By Chauncey G. Parker, jr.,

Of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, President, the Bond Club of Washington.

To review the year 1938 from the point of view of the bond market one must immediately recall the difficult first few months. This was a period of anxiety for all engaged in the business of banking or investment, marked by extreme dullness and a continuation of the declines which started in 1937.

The weakest group, of course, were the securities of those companies whose earnings had suffered during the previous months of depression in 1937. As the war clouds grew definitely blacker in Europe all classes of securities, including high-grade corporate and municipal bonds, also showed declining prices.

Late in the spring the municipal bond market turned and, as is so often the case, gave a clew to the fact that higher prices would be seen in other parts of the list. The advances continued, particularly in the high-grade and municipal list, with the result that today interest rates on these obligations are incredibly low. Money is plentiful and borrowers with good credit still hesitate to commit themselves.

A craving for liquidity exists throughout the world. Many factors contribute to it. The spectre of war is of course important. Practically every government in the world is conducting its business with huge deficits. In this country we have had special and new forms of taxation with which to contend. Large investors must keep their as-
